New Leader in Thailand

Sa-ngad Chaloryu

BANGKOK, Thailand, Oct. 7—Several months ago, a crew from Bangkok's Metropolitan Electricity Authority found it would have to turn off the voltage in a group of select houses along a small lane on the outskirts of the city. They approached one of the houses with trepidation. It was occupied by a senior Thai military official and such officials are not used to being told that they will have to do without something, particularly by a governmental organization. But when the problem was explained, the inhabitant, a chunky man with close-cropped hair and a broad face, smiled, observed that it was all for the public good, the electricity went off and the work was quickly completed.

Yesterday, the leadership of Thailand was suddenly and, many of his friends believe, somewhat reluctantly thrust into the hands of the military official, Adm. Sa-ngad Chaloryu. He and more than a dozen fellow officers formed the Administrative Reform Council, seized power, and Admiral Sa-ngad, as the council chairman, became Thailand's new government chief.

The post could not have gone to a more unlikely prospect, many believe. And it is largely for this reason that these people say that the admiral does not hold the real power. They say that it lies with other, stronger officers and particularly leaders of the army, which has traditionally dominated the military hierarchy, leaving the tiny, weak navy far behind in power, prestige and perquisites.

Personality and Reputation
 Then why was Admiral Sa-ngad chosen as the junta's public face? The reasons most widely mentioned are his character, his personality and his unscarred reputation. He has the kind of image that the junta is trying to project to the Thai people in an effort to heal the scars of weeks and months of turmoil and one day—yesterday—of bloody conflict.

Sa-ngad Chaloryu was born March 3, 1915, in Suphanburi Province north of Bangkok. Little is known of his life until he was graduated from the Royal Naval Academy in 1939 and began his rise through the ranks of the military. The service he chose has always been the least significant in the Thai military—with fewer than 24,000 officers and men—largely because most of Thailand's wars have been with landlocked neighbors to the north.

During World War II, he served on torpedo boats, the backbone of the Thai navy. His first wife was killed during that war, reportedly as the result of an allied bombing raid. His second wife, Sukon, is a fourth-generation Christian and one of the leading Protestant leaders in Southeast Asia. He has two children—a son studying architecture in the United States and a daughter studying medicine in Germany. In November of 1951, Sa-ngad Chaloryu was imprisoned briefly because of a peripheral involvement in an abortive attempt to overthrow Field Marshal Pibul Songgram. He bounced back quickly. During the 1960's he held a succession of executive positions with the fleet, including deputy commander in chief, and chief of staff. In November 1973, he was named naval commander in chief and two years later supreme commander of the armed forces.

He was apparently aligned with no outside political forces—his only political posts having been a two-year appointment by the King to a seat in the largely ceremonial Senate and a two-year appointment to the National Legislative Assembly, a huge body that drafted the constitution. Ironically, it was this Constitution that the admiral abolished last night.

Appointment by Pramoj
 It was his apparent nonalignment with any major political party that resulted in his appointment three days ago to the post of defense minister when Prime Minister Seni Pramoj was unable to settle on any of the claimants to the post among members of his fragmenting coalition.

Later, attempts were made to install him in a party. According to senior Democratic Party politicians he had agreed to join their party when the entire exercise was rendered moot by the coup, in which all political parties were dissolved.

His political philosophy is not clear, though he is presumed to be a moderate, leaning to the right. Western diplomats consider him pro-American.

closely to the West and particularly the United States than the ousted Government of Prime Minister Seni Pramoj, who reportedly remains in what was described as protective custody.

Members of the Administrative Reform Council, the Junta headed by Adm. Sa-ngad Chaloryu that seized power at 6 P.M. yesterday, met today with the under secretaries or senior civil servants in each of the principal ministries and charged them with continuing government operations.

All other ministers and deputy ministers who served in the Seni government cleaned out their offices as the military rulers began establishing military-backed commissions to supervise some aspects of government.

Publishers and editors of principal newspapers and owners of the radio and television stations were summoned to command headquarters to be told the terms under which they might resume operations and to meet the censorship committees.

Communist Role Charged
 Lieut. Gen. Tuantong Suwanat, not a member of the junta but apparently its chief spokesman, told the publishers that Communists had been "considerably involved" in the disorders of the last few days and that the incidents had "direct repercussions on national security and stability." The general said that newspapers could apply to the junta for permission to reopen and that "the committee will consider applications for each newspaper separately."

"I feel confident that newspapers which adhere to the ideals and principles of democratic government with the King as chief of state will not suffer any repercussions whatsoever," he added.

Few Thais appeared to know precisely who was running the country beyond the chairman of the Administrative Reform Council, the retired supreme commander and defense minister, Admiral Sa-ngad. But in a series of interviews with senior military officials who are not members of the ruling junta and with others close to the military establishment, a profile of the new administrative council began to emerge.

It is said to consist of 18 four-star generals, or their equivalents in the navy and air force, and seems to be dominated by several army men—particularly the deputy supreme commander, Gen. Kriangsak Chamnanand.

Areas of Control Set Up
 The junta has organized itself into such broad areas as internal affairs, external affairs and maintenance of order. Radio announcements, which continue to be the only official source of news, indicated that Gen. Sern na Nakhorn, the army commander in chief, has been placed in charge of security and operations of the Bangkok metropolitan area.

Air Chief Marshal Kamoj Dechabongka, who replaced Admiral Sa-ngad as supreme commander last week, was placed in charge of overall national security and command. Amorn Sirikaya, the new navy commander, is reported in charge of other internal affairs.

The coup was at least the 12th forcible change of government since the military ended the power of the absolute monarchy in 1932 by a bloodless coup. Ironically, Field Marshal Thanom Kittikachorn, who was toppled as Thailand's military dictator three years ago, provided at least an indirect cause of yesterday's seizure of power by the military from the civilian government of Prime Minister Seni.

Exiled to Singapore in October 1973 after a bloody series of battles between students and the military, Marshal Thanom returned to Thailand as a Buddhist monk three weeks ago and students took to the streets to protest. The protests ended yesterday morning when the police stormed into Thammasat University. Hours later, the military announced it had seized power.

Causes of the Coup
 The real causes of the coup seemed today to go far deeper. The military has long been a major power in Thai politics and society. But student power is a comparatively recent phenomenon that reached its zenith in the anti-Thanom action of three years ago. It was undertaken by a broad coalition of lightly organized student groups. Some of that organization persisted, but the students' quickly fragmented, largely along class lines.

The elitist students from the liberal-arts universities, mostly from the wealthier, better educated and more socially elevated families, drifted to the left. The vocational university students drifted toward the right wing and the military.

Politicians have been quick to take advantage of this split, particularly in view of the shortage of other comparably organized groups in Thai society. Labor unions are weak or nonexistent. Political parties fragmented with little large following. The students apparently remain the only group capable of generating a demonstration or poster campaign on a moment's notice.

Military Felt It Had Support
 Many politicians agreed today that because of the fragmentation of political parties and the growing conflict among the students, the military had concluded that it was time to intervene and that it had won broad enough popular support for such a takeover to hold.

Plans for the coup had apparently been formulated in January when the military applied substantial pressure on the then Prime Minister, Kukrit Pramoj, Mr. Seni's predecessor, either to dissolve Parliament and call new elections that could strengthen the hand of the right wing or to face the likelihood of a coup.

Sources close to the junta said tonight that the first nine major directives the body issued had been drafted in January. The speed of yesterday's takeover, agreed upon in a matter of hours, took many, even within the military hierarchy, by surprise.

What the Administrative Reform Council hopes, according to some officials close to its operation, is that its work can be completed within three months and the government turned back to civilian rule, probably with a right-wing politician at its head.

The jockeying has apparently already begun for this post led by such right-wing military politicians as Gen. Pramarn Adireksarn, the Minister of Agriculture and former defense minister, and Gen. Chatri Choonhavan, the Minister of Industry and former foreign minister.

Japan Demands Soviet Free Boat
 TOKYO, Oct. 7 (Reuters)—Japan today demanded the return of a fishing boat and its seven-member crew seized by a Soviet patrol boat off Siberia last month, the Foreign Ministry reported. Earlier last month, a Soviet pilot defected to Japan in a top-secret MiG-25 jet interceptor, which has been taken apart and examined by Japanese and Americans.

We're betting that our tobacco is better than your tobacco. If you don't like Captain Black or Captain Black Gold better than Amphora or Borkum Riff, just send us the empty pouches of our tobacco and we'll send you a dollar.

We're making this offer because we believe we understand pipe smokers. Just as the surfer travels around the world looking for that one Perfect Wave, the pipe smoker roams all over the tobacco market looking for that one Perfect Tobacco.

With no modesty at all, we announce two perfect tobaccos: Captain Black and Captain Black Gold. Two extraordinary pipe mixtures, both designed to make pipe smoking a total pleasure.

Open a pouch or tin of Captain Black and discover the sinfully insinuating scent of this masterful blend of Cavendish, White Burley and rare Turkish in this deep black, bite-free pipe mix.

Then, for lovers of the great Cavendish—there is Captain Black Gold, the most carefully selected, most matured Cavendish you can buy. It's exceptionally mild, slow-burning and non-biting.

So try Captain Black and Captain Black Gold now. You'll either discover the tobacco you love, or you'll get a dollar. If you don't think our tobaccos are better than your tobaccos, send the pouches from both our tobaccos to Lane Limited, 419 Park Avenue South, New York City, N.Y. and we'll send you a dollar. Rhodesia, Two Weeks Later: Dismay for Some Hope for Others and Bewilderment for Nearly All

HENRY KAMM
to The New York Times

Salisbury, Rhodesia, Oct. 7—The and backbiting in the two weeks passed since Prime Minister Ian Smith stumped Rhodesians in support of majority rule have dispelled the euphoria that greeted it as the way out of the one many whites feared—an impasse of intercommunal and rising guerrilla violence.

At the time, the events of the week raised the hopes of those who were shocked by what some called Smith's surrender and resignation. And they have heightened the anger of most Rhodesians who see the move as a capitulation to the guerrillas.

In the general guessing that replaces analysis in this complex equation, the relations between any two of the five are believed to range from strained at best to openly hostile.

Black and white observers believe that Bishop Muzorewa may be unwarrantedly optimistic in believing that the nationalists can be sufficiently united to form as few as "two or three parties."

Mr. Nkomo and Bishop Muzorewa are the best known of the leaders and the most openly antagonistic. They have met once since the Smith announcement, without narrowing the distance between them. The Bishop snubbed Mr. Nkomo, canceling a meeting that they agreed to hold this week, and Mr. Nkomo left the country in anger to seek the support of Mr. Mugabe, who has exiled himself in Mozambique, and of African heads of state.

Personal Antagonism and Ambitions

Mr. Sithole also lives in Mozambique, and it is assumed that the "army commander"—if there is one man who commands the bulk of the guerrillas—is based on the Mozambique-Rhodesia border.

The obscure political structure of the black-nationalist movement is compounded by the political vagueness surrounding all its principal figures. Personal antagonism and individual ambitions are believed to be greater factors in their differences than political distinctions.

Mr. Mugabe is considered to be the most leftist, indeed Marxist. But Roman Catholic churchmen who have known him for much of his life esteem him as devout and a regular churchgoer. Bishop Muzorewa is widely considered to be susceptible to strong leftist influence. But his church is far from liberal, and in his office literature is displayed from ultraconservative Protestant groups crusading against Communism.

Son at School in Budapest

Bishop Muzorewa accuses Mr. Nkomo of being manipulated by the United States and of being in possession of a secret document given to him by Mr. Kissinger. But on his European travels Mr. Nkomo never fails to stop in Budapest, where his son is being educated as a guest of the Hungarian Government. In conversation, he expounds to visitors the superiority of the social system of Communist countries.

Moreover, little is known of the extent of control the political leaders exercise over guerrilla forces. Mr. Mugabe is thought to have more troops at his command than the others. The question of whether those nationalists who participate in the conference can undertake to assure the end of warfare after establishment of the interim government, remains troubling to those who want majority rule.

But before this issue can be solved, an interim government has to be formed in a matter of weeks and the nationalists will have to agree on a Prime Minister and the majority of his cabinet. There will also have to be agreement on the two black members of the four-member council of state that will have the vital task of supervising the drafting of the Constitution of Zimbabwe, as Rhodesia is called by African nationalists.

White opponents of majority rule are beginning to believe that Mr. Smith entered into the agreement because he knew that the lack of black unity would bring about a stalemate favoring the continuation of white rule. More objective political observers do not suspect the Prime Minister of such reasoning.

But in an atmosphere in which nothing that seemed to be achieved two weeks ago is taken for granted any more, proponents of majority rule are increasingly looking to the outside powers concerned—the United States, Britain, and the leaders of the neighboring black states—to bring together the factions of the nationalist movement and banish the shades of the Congo and Angola that are being recalled by many.

whites who fear and oppose it and want to see the Kissinger initiative fail.

The question is: is the black nationalist political leadership ready to overcome its history of factionalism to confront Mr. Smith at the conference table sufficiently unified to form a government?

Guessing Replaces Analysis

In an interview yesterday, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, one of the contenders for top leadership, said that if the various factional leaders could not agree on a joint delegation to the conference, they must attend as "two or three parties."

Speaking in the offices of his United Methodist Church, the American-educated churchman listed five men whose participation he considered necessary. They were, besides himself, Joshua Nkomo, Robert Mugabe, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, and a man whom he called the "army commander" but would not identify.

Two weeks ago, majority rule in two interim governments within the same two months, seemed like a pressure, exercised through South Africa, had Smith Government and the Lesian Front Party to abandon opposition to allowing six million Africans to count now in the hands of 300,000 whites.

Black and white leaders of the black nationalist movement have been condemned by the Secretary of State for their refusal to accept majority rule in two interim governments to a conference of all Rhodesians over by Britain.

London Favored

Mr. Sithole, who has been seriously shaken two days ago, appeared to be aligned with the black African press. Yesterday issued a sharp rebuke to all concerned that announced, in words that were not negotiable, that the conference to determine government will still be held in London, and that it may be convened there.

Mr. Sithole more vexing for the now emerged, giving deep meaning to the belief that majority rule is a reality, and the significant number of

Rhodesia Says Rebels Bomb Bridge, Sending Train Crashing Into River

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Oct. 7 (UPI)—Rhodesian security forces said today that black nationalist guerrillas blew up a concrete-and-steel railroad bridge yesterday as an ore train was crossing the Matetsi River.

The explosion, about 32 miles south of the Zambia border and 18 miles east of the border with Botswana, destroyed two sections of the eight-span bridge and sent 11 of the train's 24 ore carriers crashing into the river. The train was presumably carrying copper.

Two engineers aboard the train escaped injury, railway officials said, because their locomotive had passed the spot where the bomb had been planted. The engine was derailed but did not fall from the bridge.

The railroad does not carry traffic to or from Rhodesia. The route is used exclusively for goods from Zaire and Zambia destined for export through South African ports.

Communists Are Accused

Rhodesia's army commander, in a speech several hours after the blast was announced, said African Communists, particularly the Marxist Government in Mozambique, were helping to increase guerrilla activity in an attempt to thwart Western plans for a peaceful transition to black majority rule.

"There's going to be a last-ditch attempt on the part of the Communists to wreck the proposals," Lieut. Gen. Peter Walls said. "You can see that going already."

General Walls said that in recent days there had been incursions of groups of "19-plus terrorists in various areas."

A security forces communiqué announcing the explosion said that since yesterday troops had killed six guerrillas and seized a quantity of weapons. The deaths brought imported guerrilla losses this year to 1,086.

Bridges and railroads have frequently been attacked by guerrillas, but the new bombing was one of the most carefully executed. Previous attacks have been on lines linking Rhodesia with Botswana and South Africa.

All passenger and freight service on the Matetsi line was cut and officials could not estimate when it would be restored.

The authorities said they could not tell whether the weight of the locomotive had triggered the explosion or the bomb had been set off by remote control.

U.S. Mediation in Africa Denounced by Brezhnev As 'Fictitious Liberation'

Special to The New York Times

MOSCOW, Oct. 7—Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist Party leader, today assailed United States mediation efforts in southern Africa as an attempt to "substitute a fictitious liberation" that would actually perpetuate white supremacy there.

Mr. Brezhnev did not mention Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger by name in his remarks, which were at a dinner welcoming President Agostinho Neto of Angola, but the context seemed clear. The Soviet leader went on to repeat a Moscow assertion that the Soviet Union had no "special interests" to pursue in Africa.

The remarks by Mr. Brezhnev were milder than the sometimes strident criticism the Soviet press directed at Mr. Kissinger's "shuttle diplomacy" last month. But the point seemed the same—to portray the United States and Britain as working against the interests of the African people by shoring up the white leaderships of Rhodesia and South Africa.

The Soviet leader said: "Now that Africa has demonstrated its ability to cope itself with the remnants of colonialism and racism, some people, pretending to help this process, began to make attempts to substitute a fictitious liberation for genuine liberation of the south of Africa."

This was being done, Mr. Brezhnev continued, "in effect to preserve the positions of imperialism in the area, to support the power of the Republic of South Africa, this tottering bastion of racism."

The Soviet Union has been uncomfortable over Mr. Kissinger's efforts to bring about a peaceful transition to majority rule in Rhodesia, feeling that it was being done to undercut the Soviet investment in the black nationalist movement of the region.

Nigeria Drafts Democratic Charter Keyed to Restoring of Civilian Rule

By JOHN DARNTON
Special to The New York Times

LAGOS, Nigeria, Oct. 7—The military Government released today the draft of a new constitution, a voluminous and painstakingly prepared document that would turn Nigeria into Africa's foremost multiparty democracy.

The blueprint envisions a strong executive, modeled on the system of the United States, as head of a federation of the current 19 states. It calls for universal suffrage, contains a comprehensive bill of rights and includes provisions designed to dampen the ethnic and tribal rivalries that embroiled parliamentary politics in Nigeria before the military seized power in 1966.

The Government released the draft to generate national discussion, and a constituent assembly one year from now is to change and ratify it.

"So, ladies and gentlemen, from today we can consider that the national debate on the constitution has started," Brig. Shehu Yaradua, the chief of staff, said as he sat before a battery of microphones and cameras in Dodan barracks.

Civilians Promised Power in 1979

Today's development was a sign that the military Government, which toppled another military regime last year, is sincere in its commitment to hand power back to civilians in October 1979. The Government has pressed ahead with a strict timetable, starting with elections for local representative councils later this month, that is beginning to quicken the long-slumbering pulse of political life here.

Schools and churches are opening to long lines of people registering to vote, and newspaper columnists are dusting off words they have not used for years. Old politicians are becoming active again. New ones, including even a well-known musical performer, are talking about running for office.

The ripple effect from Nigeria, by far the largest nation in West Africa, has already reached other countries. In Ghana, where the military gave power back to civilians only to seize it again later, a call for a return to civilian rule has just been raised by the national bar association.

In Nigeria, where there are three major and often rival ethnic groups and 250 often fearful ethnic minorities, the proposed constitution stresses "national unity" and says that the predominance in government agencies of "a few ethnic or other sectional groups shall be avoided." Political parties, which were regionalized and tribalized in the years before the military took power, would be governed by committees with members from at least two-thirds of the states and would not be allowed to take on names or mottos suggesting tribal affiliations.

The committee rejected after considerable debate, according to an introduction to the draft, two more radical proposals. One prescribed socialism for the development of the country, and the other limited the amount of state land held by one person to a single plot.

Nigerian Assails Kissinger 'Secrecy'

By KATHLEEN TELTSCHE
Special to The New York Times

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 7—Nigeria's Commissioner for External Affairs today attacked the "secrecy" surrounding Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's negotiations on southern Africa and complained that he might have impaired efforts to secure early independence for Namibia, as South-West Africa is known here.

Joseph Garba said at a news conference that Mr. Kissinger and the United States had it "within their power" to compel South Africa to get out of Namibia, which it has continued to control in defiance of United Nations rulings.

The Nigerian, who holds the rank of Brigadier in his country's military Government, said Mr. Kissinger should have begun by "taking a crack" at resolving the Namibia issue. He objected that Mr. Kissinger had instead embarked on negotiations "shrouded in secrecy" that served to convey a "ticket of respectability" on Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa for a role he supposedly played in pressing for a Rhodesian settlement.

Under these circumstances, it would have been "morally difficult" for Mr. Kissinger to have secured concessions from Mr. Vorster regarding Namibia, the Nigerian Minister declared. He also said that the secrecy surrounding the Kissinger initiative, and reports filtering back, had stirred suspicions among some Africans that a "shady deal" had been made to gain quick concessions on the Rhodesian issue.

A number of African representatives here have privately expressed the view that Mr. Kissinger, in return for Mr. Vorster's help, would not push the issue of Namibia. The same allegation has been made by representatives of the South-West African People's Organization, which the United Nations recognizes as the "authentic" representative of the Namibian people.

Some Western representatives, however, saw an element of pique in the Nigerian criticism, possibly evoked by Nigeria's not having played a role in the recent negotiations comparable to that of Zambia, Tanzania and others.

Third-world countries have been circulating a proposed resolution that calls for a mandatory arms embargo against South Africa to compel its Government to give up Namibia and agree to elections under United Nations auspices. A similar resolution was blocked last year by the vetoes of the United States, Britain and France. The three Western powers oppose the use of sanctions, which the United Nations Charter provides should be invoked only in crises involving aggression or threats to peace.

In the Security Council today, the use of sanctions was supported by China and Panama, and it was agreed to hold off further debate until next week. This will permit time for continuing the Namibia negotiations started by Mr. Kissinger.

Even among third-world advocates of sanctions there appears to be a divergence. Some are willing to force a vote—and certain Western veto—and others object that such an outcome would make the current American diplomatic efforts in southern Africa more difficult, and even encourage South Africa by showing Western willingness to use the veto on her behalf.

French Trying to Get Mummy Out of Its Box

PARIS, Oct. 7 (AP)—Before figuring out how to stop decay in the 3,200-year-old mummy of Ramses II, French scientists are trying to get it safely out of an oak packing crate unceremoniously marked "top" and "bottom."

"We spent the last week trying to devise a way to take the mummy out laterally," Prof. Lionel Balout, the 69-year-old director of the Ramses II project at the Museum of Man, said in an interview in his office, just down the corridor from the operating theater where the mummy is kept. "We even sent two technicians to Cairo for advice."

After the pharaoh's mummy is removed from the crate, it will be examined extensively by infrared, electron and X-ray photography. Then Professor Balout and his team of about 20 French and Egyptian experts will decide how to stop the decay and preserve the remains.

Ramses II is famous for the Temples of Abu Simbel and other vast building projects undertaken during his reign, from 1301-1235 B.C. He is widely believed to be the pharaoh who refused to let the people of Moses go.

Nuclear War Is Inescapable, Swedish Group Asserts

Friday, Oct. 8 (Reuters) — Scientists here will be able to make it within nine years and it become inevitable, the national Peace Research Institute today.

The scientists said also that scientists in West were striving for technology that would give atomic strike temptations to the United States or the me in a new publication, Disarmament in the North marks the institute's independent organ as an international organ set up by the Swedish Parliament in 1966 to commemorate 150 years of unbroken peace in Sweden.

The publication painted a gloomy picture of far-reaching technical advances in nuclear, chemical, bacteriological and conventional weaponry. It said the spread of nuclear capability to about 35 countries by 1985 would be a by-product of peaceful nuclear programs.

Stating that several "near nuclear" countries felt themselves in grave danger because of their geopolitical circumstances, the institute predicted that pressures on them to go nuclear would become irresistible.

In such a situation, maintaining present balance in Soviet-American relations would become impossible.

Because of differing levels of nuclear sophistication "there will therefore arise many situations in which a successful pre-emptive strike will either be possible or at least seem to be possible," it said.

"In such a world, stable nuclear 'deterrence' as we have known it will become impossible, and war will become inevitable."

The institute warned that although the nuclear arsenals of the United States and the Soviet Union at present insured mutual destruction, qualitative technological advances could upset the balance.

"To make matters worse, it is not really exist; if the leaders simply believe it exists, then the situation may become dangerously unstable," the publication said.

2 Killed, Many Wounded As First Major Race Riot Breaks Out in Portugal

By MARVINE HOWE

Special to The New York Times

LISBON, Oct. 7.—Two men from Portugal's former colony of the Cape Verde Islands were killed and a score of Cape Verdeans and Portuguese were wounded last night in this country's first major race riot.

Some 130 Cape Verdeans involved in the clashes have been taken to the Santa Margarida airbase, near Abrantes, north of here, it was announced tonight. Rep-representatives of the Cape Verde Embassy will go there tomorrow to decide what is to be done with them.

The violence occurred among workers at the wolfram-tungsten mines of Panasqueira, in the Estrela Mountains, 18 miles west of Fundão in central Portugal. The mines are owned by the Beralt Tin and Wolfram Company, which has British, American, South African and Portuguese capital.

"The problem was basically racial," a company source said in a telephone interview today. "The Cape Verdeans and the Portuguese really despise each other, although there have been some mixed marriages here."

Racial tensions have been building up in Portugal for 18 months with the influx of refugees from Lisbon's former African colonies.

The Cape Verdeans, who are mostly racially mixed, often resented Portuguese workers, who generally had less education but better jobs.

There have always been minor troubles at the mines between the two groups, according to company sources.

The British general manager of the mines, Martin Watts, issued a brief account today of the fighting, which began at 1 A.M. According to his casualty list, there were two black Cape Verdeans dead, seven blacks and one white seriously injured, and seven whites and one black with minor injuries.

Eyewitnesses reported that the trouble began when a group of Cape Verdeans with knives invaded the single men's quarters and began fighting the Portuguese workers. The Portuguese were held prisoner until dawn. Yesterday afternoon, the Portuguese retaliated with pitchforks, poles, axes and hunting rifles.

Allon, at U.N., Avoids Attack That Would Give P.L.O. Chance to Speak

By PETER GROSE

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 7—Israel argued its case before the General Assembly today, carefully avoiding a direct attack on the Palestine Liberation Organization that could have given that non-member organization a chance to take the rostrum.

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon stated his Government's readiness to attend a new peace conference at Geneva on the Middle East—a fact answer to a Soviet proposal made last week. But he insisted that only the "original membership" of the December 1973 conference could attend. That would automatically bar the P.L.O.

Mr. Allon also revived an Israeli proposal for negotiations on arms-limitations agreements between Israel and the Arab countries.

"We are prepared now, even before peace is made, to negotiate with our neighbors for a balanced limitation of the inflow of arms into the area," Mr. Allon said. "In such a manner that the burden will be lightened for all without affecting adversely the security and the defensive capacity of any."

For the foreign ministers and delegates sitting in the Assembly—most Arab delegates and the P.L.O. conspicuously absent themselves as the Israeli minister started to speak—it was what Mr. Allon did not say that was important. He never once mentioned the organization, which is an overall grouping of Palestinian guerrilla units; only once did he refer to the Palestinians themselves, and that in a conciliatory context:

P.L.O. Awaiting Its Chance

"We would hope to negotiate, with each of our neighbors, a final peace settlement based on a fair compromise which, on the one hand, will provide Israel with defensive borders, and, on the other, satisfy genuine Arab interests, including, within the context of the settlement with our neighbor to the east, a just and constructive solution to the problem of Palestinian Arab identity."

Israeli diplomats confirmed that this reticence on the subject of the Palestinian organization and peoples was deliberate. Ever since this 31st Assembly began, the P.L.O. delegation has been seeking a pretext to address the meeting, and thus enhance its stature in terms of protocol.

Up to now only United Nations members have been permitted to speak in the general debate. The P.L.O. is an invited observer.

A direct attack on the organization would have invited a request to reply which the President of the General Assembly, Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe, would have found difficult to refuse.

Syrian Troop Movement Is Reported in Lebanon; Guerrillas Fear Attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Oct. 7 (Reuters)—Large movements of Syrian troops were reported today in mountain areas south-east of here. Palestinian guerrilla spokesmen said it appeared that an attack against the port city of Saida was being prepared.

The Moslem-leftist radio station in Beirut said that Saida, the last main port available to the Palestinians and their Lebanese Moslem allies, had been turned into a fortress, with barricades and checkpoints on streets and road is 25 miles south of Beirut.

Syria's forward positions are Christian town of Jezzín, 10 miles from Saida. The Damascus radio, by the Syrian Government, reports reportedly made by Lebanese guerrillas in the Jezzín area for an attack against the Palestinians.

Meanwhile, the major front Lebanese conflict were relative today. Some shooting erupted during the day between rival radical Palestinian groups, the Front for the Liberation of the General Command.

During the night, some artillery struck the Presidential Palace at a residential area in the hills on capital. The new Lebanese President, Elias Sarkis, was compelled to enter in the basement.

Peru's Military Government Reports It Has Quelled a Communist Group Supporting Itself by Cr

By JUAN de ONIS
Special to The New York Times

LIMA, Peru, Oct. 7—Peru's military Government said today that it had broken up a revolutionary group of Communists who were supported financially by bank robberies and smuggling of cocaine.

Gen. Luis Cisneros Vizquerra, the Interior Minister, said at a news conference that as a result of the discovery of this armed group, called the Peruvian Popular Army, security forces had arrested 17 people and seized large amounts of arms, ammunition and dynamite along with files describing people scheduled for terrorist attacks.

With these arrests, the general added, there are now 143 people under arrest for subversive activities, among them leaders of mine workers, teachers, and other union and student organizations.

Diplomatic sources said that several junior officers of the army have been retired from active duty as a result of the links established between them and the revolutionary group and at least four have taken asylum in embassies here.

'Believed in Armed Violence'

"The documents of this group show that they believed in armed violence as the way to liberate the people, and the Government of the armed forces is going to be inflexible against anyone that tries to disrupt the peace and concord that now exists in the country," General Cisneros said.

The group, which sprang from revolutionary student organizations at the University of San Marcos here, has been under investigation since March. The timing of the disclosure of the investigation and the significant number of recent arrests of leftist union and student leaders is regarded as evidence that the military is adopting a more forceful anti-Communist position.

Since President Francisco Morales Bermudez unseated the leader of the military revolution of 1968, Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado, in the presidency, the most prominent of the leftist officers of the armed forces have been relieved of commands and gone into retirement.

The country has been under a state of emergency since July, with a curfew in effect here in Lima, the capital, from 1 A.M. to 6 A.M. Bursts of rifle fire are heard every night as armored cars patrol the streets. An economic state of emergency has also been declared in the light of a serious inflation and foreign-debt problem.

The military Government is reconsidering some measures, dating from the revolution, of property distribution and participation by workers and peasants in management of industries and farms expropriated under agrarian reform. The leftist political groups in the unions, universities and peasant organizations, however, are strongly opposed to any such retreat. They regarded the economic measures adopted by the military as moves toward socialism.

Policies Fail to Bear Fruit

But businessmen, taking advantage of the economic crisis, are pressing for changes to restore management control and security for capital. Without, they argue, there will be no investment and development in the private sector.

This is a debate that goes to the heart of the ideology of the Peruvian military, which is based on harmony between capital and labor as a condition for peace.

In practice, the policies have lacked stimulus for private industry, a loss of productivity by labor strikes and lack of discipline, reduction of production on expropriated land for lack of technical management and credit.

The arrests of leftists and downing of the revolutionary group taken as a demonstration that the military will not allow armed during a period of reconsideration.

Agents Arrest

in Raids to Bar Mexican Heroin

ON Oct. 7 (AP)—Federal agents today arrested more than 200 dealers in Mexican heroin that the action had struck at heroin smuggling operations.

Not represent an end to heroin distribution in the United States, but I think it is a step toward the heroin distribution.

B. Bensinger, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, told reporters that the 230 alleged smugglers had been arrested and that they were for conspiracy to distribute possession or sale of heroin.

About 200 more suspects were arrested and that he expected more arrests to reach 300.

He said that the arrests represent the third phase of a four-part plan to destroy heroin distribution in this country.

The first phase has led to the arrest of 1,300 persons, he added. Agents had determined that distribution centers for Mexico are Detroit, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego.

Those arrested were named and returned by Federal grand juries and unsealed yesterday.

Stars and Stripes Chief in Europe Quits After Dispute Over Articles

By CRAIG R. WHITNEY
Special to The New York Times

BONN, Oct. 7—The editor in chief of the United States armed forces-sponsored newspaper, The Stars and Stripes, left his job a week early today after his superiors complained that they had not been warned about publication of a series of articles on the black market for Army goods in Europe.

The editor, Col. James H. Taylor of the Air Force, said he had originally been scheduled to leave the newspaper on Oct. 15 and fly to the United States on Oct. 21. "I have nothing else to say," he said.

Members of the Stars and Stripes staff in Griesheim say the paper could lose its editorial independence from the United States European Command as a result of this incident. Colonel Taylor, who gave up his job voluntarily this morning, had on Tuesday received what his superior, Capt. Russell F. Harney of the Navy, described as a "chewing-out."

Complaint of a Surprise

"I had expressed interest in the series months ago," Captain Harney said, "and yet I picked up the paper Tuesday and there it was. All I asked was to be given warning first."

The series began on the front page of Tuesday's issue and concentrated on the black market in West Germany, where 214,000 soldiers and 100,000 civilian employees and American dependents are stationed. It reported that tax-free cigarettes, whisky, gasoline and stereophonic equipment are being sold in "unprecedented proportions" in West Germany 30 years after the shortages caused by World War II.

The articles were written by the paper's three-man special-projects team, and contain extensive quotes from United States military, West German and foreign law-enforcement officials.

"I approved every article that ran before it went in," Colonel Taylor said today. "If any don't run, it's not my fault. We tried hard, but my leaving has nothing to do with any recent things that cropped up."

ing to do with any recent things that cropped up."

Captain Harney, who heads an editorial policy committee that oversees the paper, said he had not asked Colonel Taylor to leave early and added that all 12 articles of the series would run as scheduled. "I still don't know what's in the ones that will be printed tomorrow," he said.

The Stars and Stripes reporters found that illegal selling of American goods extended to at least eight other countries. There is no single place where those goods are sold openly, the paper found, but there are thousands of cases of "smuggling" by American military personnel all over Europe.

For instance, the series said, 3,550 cartons of cigarettes were found by the West German police in a truck belonging to a member of the United States military in Frankfurt, and nearly $290,000 worth of whisky found its way illegally to the open market here. The reason is not shortages but price differences. Top-grade bourbon costs soldiers $6 a half-gallon; Germans pay nearly $15 dollars for the same amount, the paper reported.

Series Reported Not Censored

Another staff member of the newspaper, which is sponsored by the Stuttgart-based United States European Command under Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., said that the articles had not been censored by Colonel Taylor's superiors.

But he added that some officers, in Stuttgart and in Washington, had expressed "extreme displeasure" when the stories began appearing, fearing their effect on American-West German relations.

The staff member went on to say that an earlier series, on the shortcomings of the Army commissary system, had incurred the displeasure of senior Army officers. The Stars and Stripes has a circulation of 100,000 and has enjoyed notable editorial freedom in recent years.

6 Million in France Heed Call by the Unions to Stage A 24-Hour National Strike

Special to The New York Times

PARIS, Oct. 7—More than six million Frenchmen heeded a union call for a 24-hour nationwide strike today to protest Government austerity measures, thereby preventing many more French workers from doing their jobs.

The strike was most effective in the industrial areas of Lyons and Le Havre. In Paris, traffic was drastically curtailed, with only one-third of the subway system and suburban trains operating.

Nationally, there were no domestic flights and 25 percent fewer trains. Brief electricity stoppages disrupted work in shops and stores that were trying to do business as usual. There were no newspapers and no mail. Teachers stayed home. And even plainclothes policemen joined in the movement, although they had a different reason, a demand for more policemen to cope with rising crime.

Hundreds of thousands of demonstrators marched in Paris, and in Lyons and Marseilles there were mass rallies that were also described as the biggest since the 1968 student and worker uprising.

The strike and demonstrations were called by the country's top two union confederations. They were joined by the powerful teachers union. The three are said to represent a combined membership of 4 million.

Chief target of the protest action was that part of the Government's austerity plan that the unions say affects the workers. Last month Prime Minister Raymond Barre announced a number of measures to stem inflation. The program includes a price freeze, higher corporate taxes, guidelines limiting next year's wage raises to 6.5 percent, a rise in the prices of gasoline and cars and a 4 percent increase in taxes on middle-level wages.

City U. Losing Graduate Students

younger teachers who didn't have a master's degree."

He said that the university would soon undertake a major study of its graduate education program, which accounts for about three-fourths of the graduate enrollment. "We will give serious thought," he added, "to doing more specializing so that every campus does not offer programs in bilingual education, early childhood and so forth."

Additional factors in the enrollment decline cited by Dr. Breuner and other officials yesterday were the uncertainty that pervaded the university during the successive waves of budget cuts and faculty layoffs last year, and a "delayed" response to the decision in the summer of 1975 to increase the graduate tuition to $75 a credit from $45.

Other figures made available showed that undergraduate enrollment at the nine senior and nine community colleges dropped from 174,830 students last year to 145,019 this fall. This constitutes a decline of 29,830 students, or 17.1 percent.

Part-Time, Full-Time

The undergraduate enrollment decline, which breaks down as 21,831 in senior colleges and 7,999 in community colleges, is slightly more than the figure of 26,446 that had been projected. It was, however, in line with initial estimates published last month on the basis of preliminary registration figures.

Both the graduate and undergraduate figures are given in terms of "full-time equivalent students," which means the number of full-time programs of 15 credits a semester that students are pursuing. Under this method of accounting, used by most large academic institutions, three part-time students taking five hours apiece would be counted as one "full-time equivalent."

The actual number of full-time and part-time students at the City University is thus about 225,000.

One possibly significant trend in the figures released yesterday is that the number of full-time equivalents is not declining quite as fast as the number of students in general. This suggests that the students who remain are taking heavier loads or even shifting from part-time to full-time status.

Lester Brookner, vice president for planning and administration at Brooklyn College, said that this was true at his institution and made sense because "there is more financial aid available for full-time students."

Mr. Knorr emphasized that the figures released yesterday were based on figures collected at the end of formal registration and would change somewhat—presumably on the upward side—as more students complete late registration and those already registered added courses to their schedule.

Several factors are involved in the 17 percent enrollment decline among undergraduates: The factors include a new admissions policy designed to limit enrollment at senior colleges and shift some new students from senior to community colleges.

The effects of planned retrenchment, have been suggested by a decline in the number of students applying to the university. No more than 30,000 people applied for this year's freshman class, in contrast with 40,368 last year and 41,970 in 1974.

As for the effects of the charging of tuition fees for undergraduates, "it certainly doesn't look as if it made a major difference to us," said Jacqueline G. Wexler, president of Hunter College. "The general perception," she said, "seems to be that 'tuition is something that can be coped with.'"

Robert F. Carroll Jr., a vice president of City College, said that enrollment projections there were "right on target" and that, in addition to graduate programs, the principal losses had been in the SEEK program, which subsidizes disadvantaged students.

On a related issue, Alan Mishne, director of financial aid for the City University, said that 114,304 City U. students had been declared eligible for a total of $59.5 million in state tuition assistance.

Audit by Control Board Finds City U. Is Meeting Its Fiscal 1977 Target

By EDWARD RANZAL

The City University of New York was reported on target yesterday in meeting its fiscal 1977 financial plan.

However, Sidney Schwartz, the head monitor for the New York State Emergency Financial Control Board, in the first monthly audit of New York City's spending, warned of a possible $200,000 deficit and the need for a concrete plan by the university to meet a $14.5 million proposed wage increase without reducing services.

Mr. Schwartz noted that the university had closed last May 28 because of a lack of funds. Emergency state legislation was adopted on June 10 enabling the university to open. The legislation required the development of a detailed financial plan, which is being reviewed by the city and ultimately requires approval by the Control Board.

However, the plan does not detail the potential cash cost of wage agreements negotiated this summer, the audit said. The wage agreement must also receive final approval from the Control Board. Under the board's guidelines, the university cannot pay the wage increases unless they are financed by savings not now provided in the plan.

The audit said the university had finished fiscal 1976, which ended last June 30, with a deficit of $7.9 million. The deficit resulted because the city overestimated state aid by $7 million and student revenues by $900,000. Mr. Schwartz said that the city "has yet to take action on this deficit."

Mr. Schwartz said a review of the plan "indicates a possible $200,000 deficit due to expenditure underestimates of $300,000, offset in part by a $100,000 clerical error in the university's revenue estimate," adding:

"Of greater significance, however, is the question of how the university will manage its operations if prospective wage increases are implemented."

In another audit released yesterday, City Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin said the city was owed $10 million by patients who had been treated at municipal hospitals.

He said 3,800 outstanding bills of comparatively recent date have been "lying dormant" in the files of the city's Law Department because lawyers assigned to this work have either resigned or have retired. These bills, he said, total more than $4.2 million.

In addition, Mr. Goldin said there were 13,000 bills from a period prior amounting to $6 million on which collection action has ever been taken.

The audit found that there were inadequate guidelines for the various agencies to submit claims and procedures for timely collection. Mr. Goldin also announced that fresher courses for 120 audit office were being provided charge by the New York State of Certified Public Accountants' contribution to the city during trials.

DRESS SMART WITHOUT BUYING DUMB.

There are two ways to do every-life. A dumb way. And a smart

When it comes to buying a great suit, it's no different.
So, we at National Brands Stores like to explain the dumb way to
it. And then, so we don't leave you guessing, we'll show you how we can do it the smart way.

FANCY STORE. FANCY SALESMAN. FANCY PRICES.

Walk into this kind of store, and realize that where you're going looks much nicer than you live.

And if that doesn't make you feel comfortable enough, there's always a man who spends most of his time down his nose at you.
All in all, you'll have no problem putting out wearing a great looking suit.
You'll have to make some alterations within your budget to pay for it.

OTHER ALTERNATIVE: THE SCHLOCK STORE.

In their advertising, these stores scream about their low prices and high suits.

When you get into the store, advertising you'll find no high prices.

You'll also find no selection and no current fashion.

You'll be waited on by a high pressure salesman who'll do everything he can to sell you a suit. All of which makes you nervous about the suit he's trying to sell you.

More often than not, you wind up with a suit that doesn't cost much. And isn't worth much either.

NATIONAL BRANDS STORES: THE SMART WAY TO DRESS SMART.

At National Brands, we've created stores where you can buy expensive suits, sport coats, slacks, leathers and outer-wear at very inexpensive prices. (In fact, according to an independent research organization, our prices average 40 to 60 per cent less than you pay for the same suit where you're buying it now.)*

Besides carrying a low price, our price tags carry the names of designers and manufacturers you know. At National Brands, only the prices are unheard of.

What's more, our stores are open evenings. And most stores are open Sunday. Skilled tailoring is available at a reasonable cost. And a full refund on any unaltered garment returned within 7 days.

And our salesmen are always ready to help you, but only when you're ready to be helped.

So, if you're looking for a more sophisticated way of looking sophisticated, come to National Brands Stores.

Try our suits and our prices on for size.

When
you walk out,
you look smart.
And you are smart.

Montefiore Hospital Averts Strike; Walkouts Continue at 3 Institutions

By JUDITH CUMMINGS
 Completed in-house agreements, and yesterday with interns and physicians to recognize their union, a threatened strike there, like by such physicians at three other hospitals, continues for the third day.

At Montefiore Hospital, where a settlement agreement was reached yesterday, 470 members of the house staff had been threatened for noon yesterday, the two sides agreed to a settlement extending the present contract three months to allow for creation of a local affiliate of the committee.

A hospital spokesman said the local organization would be recognized as a bargaining agent, as a solution to the hospital's insistence on "dealing with our own people on our own problems."

Dr. Dobkin hailed the agreement and called it a significant step toward settlement with the other hospitals.

Meanwhile, an unrelated one-day walkout at the Albert Einstein College in the Bronx by 1,400 technicians and clerical workers was ended when District 1198 of the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees ratified a new two-year contract with the college.

Workers employed through the college returned to duty at Bronx Municipal and Lincoln Hospitals and at about 20 methuene and mental health clinics. The key factor of the agreement was retention of all but 15 of nearly 150 disputed jobs in the bargaining unit, according to a union spokesman.

The administrator of Einstein Hospital, Arthur H. Ricklin, said half of the 82 interns and residents were out yesterday, down from 60 the first day. Mr. Meyer said 25 percent were out at Brookdale, and David K. Watson said he did not know precisely how many were out at Flower & Fifth.

BOARD IS UNDECIDED ON M'CARTHY PETITION

Whether the Candidate Will Appear on the Ballot in New York State Is Unresolved Despite Long Meeting

By THOMAS P. RONAN
 After meeting for 12 hours, the New York State Board of Elections left unsettled yesterday the question of whether Eugene J. McCarthy, the former Senator, would appear on the Nov. 2 election ballot in the state as an independent candidate for President.

As expected, the two Democratic commissioners on the four-man bipartisan board ruled that Mr. McCarthy was disqualified because the petitions filed by his organization for a place on the ballot did not meet the requirements of the state election law.

Then two Republicans, also as expected, held that the petitions were in "substantial compliance" with the law and so were valid. But they then left the issue up in the air by stipulating that the board's staff should re-examine some of the signatures on the petitions to determine their validity.

Carter Supporters Are Anxious
 The petitions were challenged by the Democratic State Committee, which fears that Mr. McCarthy could take enough votes from Jimmy Carter to give the state and its crucial 41 electoral votes to President Ford.

With the board expected to meet again next week for a final ruling, a tie vote would have the effect of putting Mr. McCarthy on the ballot. But the ultimate decision is expected to be made by the courts.

In State Supreme Court yesterday,

White House Confirms I.R.S. Audit of Ford's Taxes

Special to The New York Times
 WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 — The White House confirmed today major elements of a newspaper account of an Internal Revenue Service audit of President Ford's income taxes. But, in a statement, the White House sought to rebut any suggestion of impropriety in Mr. Ford's tax history.

The Wall Street Journal, which reported that it had obtained a copy of the audit of Mr. Ford's tax returns from 1967 to 1972, said "questions are now arising about the thoroughness" of the I.R.S. inquiry and that it was now clear that few members of Congress had had time to read the audit before Mr. Ford's confirmation hearings as Vice President in 1973.

The White House statement, prepared in response to the inquiries by The Journal, acknowledged points of question in the audit and gave details about how they were resolved.

In April 1974, Jack Anderson, the columnist, also obtained a copy of the audit report that had been prepared as part of an investigation of Mr. Ford when he was nominated as Vice President by President Nixon in November 1973.

The following key points were raised and confirmed by the White House:

Mr. Ford paid $871.44 from a political account in Grand Rapids, Mich., for clothing for the 1972 Republican National Convention. The revenue agency held that this was not a political expense and assessed Mr. Ford $435.77 in taxes, which were paid by check in November 1973.

The tax investigators also found that Mr. Ford paid $1,167 in travel expenses for a skiing vacation in Vail, Colo., from the same account. In this case, Mr. Ford reported that it was an error because he thought he had reimbursed the political account from his own funds. He rectified the error shortly after being notified.

The report showed that both Mr. Ford and Mrs. Ford appeared to get along on extremely low amounts of pocket money; in Mr. Ford's case, it averaged $5 a week. But, according to White House officials, much of Mr. Ford's life in the period that he was House minority leader was involved in public functions. With expense-paid travel, use of a car or other legitimate fringe benefits, his need for out-of-pocket cash was unusually low.

From 1967 to 1972, the years covered by the audit, Mr. Ford earned a total of $454,867.06 with a taxable net income of $375,402.06, on which he paid $150,250.17. This is regarded by accountants as the "normal" tax bite at these income levels.

Kohl, Schmidt's Rival in Election, Says He'll Lead Bonn Opposition

BONN, Oct. 7 (Reuters)—Helmut Kohl, whose party narrowly failed to win last Sunday's Parliamentary elections, announced today that he would take over the leadership of the Christian Democratic opposition in the lower house of Parliament here.

Mr. Kohl told fellow Christian Democrats in Parliament that he would give up his post as Governor of the state of Rhineland-Palatinate to carry on the fight against the Social Democratic-dominated Government of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

The present opposition floor leader, Karl Carstens, who will yield his post to Mr. Kohl, disclosed the change after a meeting of newly elected deputies. Earlier Mr. Kohl had a new round of strategy talks with Franz Josef Strauss, chairman of the Christian Democrats' sister party in Bavaria, the Christian Social Union.

Audited by Congressional Panel
 Mr. Ford's tax returns for those years were audited by the I.R.S. and by auditors assigned to the Joint Congressional Committee on Taxation, which also examined the records of all his political and personal bank accounts, according to the White House and to Senate and House committee sources.

Charles F. Ruff, the Webersgate special prosecutor, is investigating an allegation of political campaign financing irregularities involving Mr. Ford's home district in Grand Rapids. The field portion of the investigation is complete. Sources familiar with the inquiry said today that there was no indication that Mr. Ruff was moving to delve into Mr. Ford's personal finances.

Mr. Ruff had no comment on the matter. Sources familiar with Mr. Ruff's investigation said no substantial evidence of illegality had been uncovered at this point.

Giants and Jets, 0-8, Likely to Be 0-10 on Sunday

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE

As the Giants and Jets prepare to open their home seasons on Sunday, one must appreciate that they have made history. Never before have New York's pro teams had a collective 0-8 won-lost record in the first month of the season. The Giants last lost their first four games in 1932 and the Jets in 1965.

About Pro Football

The Jets' opener against Buffalo did not sell out 72 hours in advance, as required, but the Giants' game against Dallas in the new stadium has sold out, so it will be televised locally by Channel 2, starting at 1 P.M. Channel 4 will show Miami at Baltimore, starting at 4 P.M. Previews of all games follow with the teams' won-lost-tied records in parentheses.

LOCAL TEAMS

Dallas (4-0-0) at Giants (0-4-0)—When the Yale Bowl opened in 1914, Harvard won, 36-0. Betting choice: Dallas by 8 points.

Buffalo (2-2-0) at Jets (0-4-0)—The Bills' new fullback, Jeff Kinney, gained 117 yards in the 50-17 rout of Kansas City and the new kicker, George Jakowenko, missed two extra-point boos. The Jets can expect boos. They rank last in touchdown passes (none) and quarterback sacks (one). Betting choice: Buffalo by 10.

AMERICAN CONFERENCE

Miami (2-2-0) at Baltimore (3-1-0)—Bob Matheson is fit again at linebacker, which will improve the Dolphins' defense. They rank last in defending against the pass (253 yards a game) and miss Jake Scott at safety where Barry Hill gets burned. Expect a big score. The Colts are also vulnerable to passing. Betting choice: Baltimore by 6.

Oakland (3-1-0) at San Diego (3-1-0)—The Chargers will have their first sellout in three years, but they have not beaten the Raiders in eight. With the Raiders' defense weakened, however, their division rivals sense they can dethrone Oakland at last. Betting choice: Oakland by 6.

Denver (3-1-0) at Houston (3-1-0)—This match will feature the game's two best kick returners, Rick Upchurch for the Broncos and Billy Johnson for the Oilers. Upchurch has returned three punts for touchdowns; the N.F.L. season record is four. Punters are kicking away from Johnson. Both sides have tough defenses which could get them in the playoffs. Betting choice: Houston by 3.

Pittsburgh (1-3-0) at Cleveland (1-3-0)—This could be the start of a seven-game winning streak for the Steelers. They had 12 turnovers in their last two defeats. Brown regulars will handle special-team chores because others have done so poorly. Betting choice: Pittsburgh by 10.

Tampa Bay (0-4-0) at Cincinnati (3-1-0)—Eight former Bengals play for the Buccaneers, including the running-backs, Ed Williams and Charlie Davis. Cincinnati didn't want them. The Bucs have scored only two touchdowns, one of which was on a kick return. The Bengals play Pittsburgh next and may be yawning. Betting choice: Cincinnati by 21.

INTERCONFERENCE

New England (3-1-0) at Detroit (1-3-0)—What were the odds that the Patriots would beat Miami, Pittsburgh and Oakland? 10,000 to 1? They did it with the best rushing offense in the league. Tommy Hudson, the Lions' new coach, hardly knows the players. He was a scout. First problem? Pass protection. Lion passers have been sacked 26 times. Betting choice: New England by 7.

Kansas City (0-4-0) at Washington (3-1-0)—Joe Theismann will be the Redskins' quarterback because Bill Kilmer has a sore passing arm. Theismann does not command the players' respect. The stumbling Chiefs can't stop the run. Willie Lanier is playing outside linebacker, with the rookie Jimbo Elrod, in the middle. Betting choice: Washington by 13.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Chicago (3-1-0) at Minnesota (3-0-1)—This one is for first place in the Central Division. The Vikings are the first of five straight 1975 playoff opponents for the young Bears. Fran Tarkenton will start for the Vikes, who have beaten Chicago seven straight times. Betting choice: Minnesota by 9.

Philadelphia (2-2-0) at St. Louis (3-1-0)—Wayne Morris, a rookie with similar speed and style, replaces the injured Terry Metcalf for the Cardinals. And they will use Steve Jones in place of Jim Otis, a 1,000-yard fullback. They still have defensive problems. The Eagles are getting tougher every week, but their quarterbacking is mediocre. Betting choice: St. Louis by 8.

Atlanta (1-3-0) at New Orleans (1-3-0)—The Falcons let a 1,000-yard runner, Dave Hampton, go to the Eagles, which was a compliment to his successor, the rookie, Bubba Bean. Recent Falcon-Saint games have been close and dull. Betting choice: Even.

Seattle (0-4-0) at Green Bay (1-3-0) in Milwaukee—It's a sellout, which is a compliment to fans still waiting for the Pack to come back. John Brockington has been benched for Barty Smith, a 240-pound fullback. The Seahawks have lost their best offensive lineman, Norm Evans, the former Dolphin. Betting choice: Green Bay by 9.

MONDAY NIGHT

San Francisco (3-1-0) at Los Angeles (3-0-1)—As a passer, Jim Plunkett still has not come around for the 49ers. The Rams can run and pass. Their weakness? The new cornerbacks, Rod Perry and Monte Jackson. Betting choice: Los Angeles by 12.

Le Baseball Is Not Yet Big, but It Is Catching on as a Pastime in France

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH

Special to The New York Times PARIS, Oct. 5—Jacques Martinau is jumping up and down near the equivalent of the dugout, flailing with his fists in the air and yelling: "Cours, Pascal! Ne t'arrêtes jamais!" ("Run, Pascal. Don't ever stop.")

He is coach of the Brunoy Red Socks, and the game (le baseball) has just begun on a makeshift diamond in the Bois de Vincennes.

Edouard Schotman, one of the frappers (sluggers) on the Delft Bluebirds from The Netherlands, has hit a high fly to left, a little beyond the reach of the winded and dejected Pascal.

van Geest, another Delft frappeur, steps up to the plate. "Come on, hit the ball, Ronnie baby!" his teammates are yelling in heavily Dutch-accented English. He does—deep, deep to center for a coup de circuit (home run). If Howard Cosell had been announcing, he would have called the game poor and miserable. The French Cadets (Little Leaguers) were simply outclassed by the Dutch. The final score was 20-4. Errors were perhaps better left unrecorded.

A passionate fan of the jeu (game) from the days he spent in Canada, he is the new secretary general of the French Baseball Federation. And he talks about waiting until next year, or the year after, to see baseball flourish in France.

LAWYER IS INDICTED ON PAYOFF CHARGE

Nursing-Home Industry Figure Is Linked to $5,000 Bribe to Advance Bronx Unit

By RICHARD J. MEISLIN

A prominent lawyer in the nursing-home industry was indicted yesterday on charges stemming from a $5,000 payoff allegedly made to an unnamed public official to gain approval of a Bronx nursing home.

The lawyer, Irwin R. Karassik, who served for 10 years as executive director of the Metropolitan New York Nursing Home Association and is now its labor counsel, was charged by the state's special nursing home prosecutor with having advised a nursing-home operator to deny to a grand jury that the payment had been made, when in fact it had.

The indictment was one of three announced yesterday by the special prosecutor, Charles H. Hynes. The other indictments charged two upstate nursing-home owners with falsely filing Medicaid claims of approximately $133,000 and with stealing about $39,000 of that amount. Mr. Karassik was indicted on one count of criminal solicitation in the second degree, which carries a possible punishment of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Mr. Karassik pleaded guilty at an arraignment before Justice Laurence J. Tonetti yesterday afternoon and was released on his own recognizance pending a hearing Nov. 19. He could not be reached for comment yesterday.

Legal observers said that although the activities outlined in the indictment point to the offering and taking of a bribe, charges could not be brought on those counts because of the statute of limitations.

Investigation Continuing

According to the indictment, Mr. Karassik served as legal counsel between 1967 and 1969 for an unnamed person who was attempting to obtain a license for a nursing home in the Bronx.

At Mr. Karassik's suggestion, the indictment charged, his client gave him $5,000 to give to a public official to "obtain official approval, or recommendation for approval" of the home.

But earlier this year, before the nursing home operator's appearance before a special Bronx grand jury investigating fraud and abuse in nursing homes, Mr. Karassik asked his former client to lie and say the payoff had not taken place, the indictment stated.

Mr. Karassik was serving as executive director of the Metropolitan New York Nursing Home Association, an organization representing close to 100 private nursing home owners, at the time the payoff incident allegedly took place.

He is now labor counsel to the association and partner in private law practice with Stanley H. Lowell, a former Deputy Mayor to Robert F. Wagner and until recently a special counsel to the nursing-home association on reimbursement matters.

Mr. Lowell at one time represented several individual nursing-home operators, including Bernard Bergman, who has been a central figure in several investigations of nursing home abuse.

Papers Subpoenaed

The nursing-home association is known to be a target of Mr. Hynes' investigation. According to papers filed in State Supreme Court here, the special prosecutor has subpoenaed the association's papers with suspicion that it "surreptitiously supports political candidates and parties" and has made "secret political payments," possibly using Medicaid funds.

In the upstate case, Jack Friedman and Sidney A. Greenwald were charged in separate indictments with grand larceny, attempted grand larceny, and filing false Medicaid claims in connection with the operations of two homes in which they are partners.

The two homes are the Friedwald House Health Related Facility in New City and the Maple Leaf Home in Monsey.

According to the indictment, Mr. Friedman fraudulently billed Medicaid for about $96,000 in nonexistent or nonreimbursable expenses—including a $2,500 personal BankAmericard bill and personal airline tickets—and personally stole about $22,000. He faces the possibility of up to 36 years in prison.

Mr. Greenwald was charged with filing fraudulent claims of more than $37,000 and with stealing about $17,000 of that amount. He faces a possible prison term of up to 19 years.

Mr. Friedman and Mr. Greenwald were arraigned before Justice Duncan McNabb in State Supreme Court in Rockland County and released on their own recognizance. Their hearing has been set for Oct. 19.

35 Years Levied for $6 Robbery

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7 (AP)—A $6 robbery has led to a 35-year prison term for the robber who shot the victim. The sentence was imposed yesterday on Bruce Morton, 21 years old, of Philadelphia by United States Judge Joseph Lord. Last week, Judge Lord meted out a 23-year sentence in another Philadelphia case, Kevin Williams, 19, for the same crime. They pleaded guilty to shooting Marine Cpl. Guy Douglas Browning, 19, of Detroit during the May 14 robbery.

Jack Rosenthal Gets New Job on The Times

Jack Rosenthal, associate editor of The New York Times and editor of The Times Magazine, will become assistant editor of the editorial page effective early next year.

The appointment was announced yesterday by Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, publisher of The Times. A successor to Mr. Rosenthal as editor of the magazine has not been selected.

Mr. Rosenthal will serve as deputy to Seth Frankel, who will succeed John B. Oakes as Editorial Page editor on Jan. 1. Mr. Oakes will become a senior editor and Fred Feuchinger, his present deputy, will remain as a member of the editorial board.

Mr. Rosenthal came to The Times in 1969 as national urban-affairs correspondent, after holding positions with various newspapers and with the Departments of Justice and State. In 1973 he was appointed assistant Sunday editor.

Public Library Is Down but Not Out

By MURRAY SCHUMACH

Imagine someone with hundreds of millions of dollars, who lives in a mansion so magnificent that it is a national landmark, panhandling for survival.

That is the plight of the jewel of the city's libraries, the Renaissance-like structure at Fifth Avenue and 41st Street, beloved by scholars from all over the world for the tomes on its 80 miles of bookshelves, for the manuscripts, drawings, music scores, and the documents from many governments that explore the universe of knowledge.

This desperate quest for money may soon bring to the library the largest grant it has ever received from the Federal Government. According to officials of the library, there is a very good chance that the Federal Government will give the library $1.5 million before long.

But there may be a condition. The library may have to raise more in matching funds than it gets, thus forcing the library to become even more of a beggar—though richer—than it already is.

A Change in Attitude

As an example of something the library would not have done in more prosperous years, when Sidney Lumet needed a room that would symbolize wealth and power for a critical confrontation between a tycoon and a television commentator in his latest movie, "The Network," his search ended in this building guarded by marble lions. He chose the trustees' room, with its paneled walls, marble fireplace, deep rug, massive table, 17th-century Flemish tapestries and teak parquet floor.

"We rented out the room for a fee," explains James W. Henderson, director of the four research libraries in the city's system, of which this is the heart.

To save money, this domain of researchers is now open only 43 hours a week. In 1971, it was open 87 hours a week. It is closed on Thursdays, as well as Sundays; until 1971 it was open every day of the year.

The freeze on hiring, combined with the increase in users, means that at this library there is, on the average, one librarian for every 5,000 users.

"Even on this reduced basis," says Mr. Henderson, "we have a deficit of $3 million a year, out of an expenditure of $16 million. It is hard to know where such economies can end. We are pretty close to the bone."

"Books are not ordered. We fall be-

Reading-room tables that are full five days a week are empty Thursdays and Sundays, when the library closes. Until 1971, it was open every day of the year.

hind in catalogue work. We do without machines for microfilm. We do without storage facilities. Everyone is working harder. But there comes a point where people get tired. Fatigue does not help morale."

Busy During Christmas

Because the library is open to the public—it has standing room when college students do term papers during Christmas—there is a widespread misconception that this library, though built by the city, is entirely supported by the city.

Actually, it is a private corporation, a result of a merger at the turn of the century between the Astor and Lenox libraries, two private libraries; and the Samuel Tilden trust fund.

However, in recent years, as private sources began to dry up, the library has gone to the public for small contributions and to the government. Today the library gets about 50 percent of its support from the Federal, state and city governments.

One plan under consideration to raise money from the public is that a room or hall in the library—there are about 200 of them—could be named after a person or group that makes a substantial donation. There is even some thought—though this may be the wry humor of those who suffer in the relative obscurity of libraries—that little name plates could be affixed to the backs of chairs in the reading rooms in honor of donors of smaller amounts, in the manner of the Metropolitan Opera House.

Although there is a constant increase in the number of those who fill out the call slips for books and then sit in the main reading room, or in rooms with special collections, officials at the library think its value is not to be calculated in the number of bodies that gather in the tranquility of the building.

Much more important, they observe, is the impact of works produced by writers there—for example, Rachel Carson's "Silent Spring," or Betty Friedan's "The Feminine Mystique," or Theodore H. White's "The Making of the President, 1964-65."

A National Memory

"Our library has a national memory," has become almost a slogan among some who work there.

This is an allusion to such items as Thomas Jefferson's hand-written draft of the Declaration of Independence; a remarkable collection of campaign buttons; more than 125,000 volumes of history and pre-history of the New World; works in 300 Indian languages that are part of the American history division.

Among the particularly precious items at the library are a Gutenberg Bible of the 15th century; Assop's Fabes, in Greek, on vellum, from 15th-century Florence; a letter by Columbus, announcing the discovery of the World; Egyptian hieroglyphics from ALEXANDRIA, N. Y. After creating twin municipalities to help themselves win jurisdictional control over Westchester County, the village suddenly found that the arrangement brought them 30 to 50 percent more state and Federal revenue-sharing money. Harrison and Scarsdale, with assets of about $21,000 and $47,000 respectively, will collect an additional $296,000 in next year from the state and Federal governments because both have set up village boundaries that coincide completely with the boundaries of the State Board of Taxation and Assessment and the Federal Internal Revenue Service.

that it had reapplied this year after town officials heard that Harrison was collecting double. The Bureau of the Census reversed its decision and will pay the Town of Scarsdale $38,000 on top of the Village of Scarsdale's $100,000 grant next year. Harrison will make out even better. A last-minute switch of the Sanitation Department from the town government into the newly created village government brought an additional $60,000 Federal payment on top of the town's usual $180,000 grant this year. Next year Harrison officials plan to put about half the town's expenditures into the village budget, increasing the village's revenue-sharing grant to $120,000.

Mr. Johnson of Scarsdale said he was not embarrassed that a community as wealthy as Scarsdale had been able to capitalize on what appeared to be a quick in the state law.

Mr. Passidomo said he felt that his town was simply redressing the balance in the state-aid system, which grants almost five times as much money to similar upstate and suburban communities because they were chartered as cities. In upper Westchester County, for example, the City of Peekskill collects $1.3 million in state aid even though its population is about the same as those of Scarsdale and Harrison, which collect only about $200,000.

purchase residents made several attempts to incorporate their own village within the Town of Harrison in order to gain zoning powers after Harrison decided to allow Texaco to situate its international headquarters in Purchase. Harrison won the game by incorporating the entire town into a village. The state law does not allow one village to incorporate within another village.

CORRECTIONS
An article on student loans in The Times Wednesday stated incorrectly that a bill awaiting President Ford's signature would retain a maximum loan limit of $15,000 for graduate education. The present limit is $10,000; the pending bill would increase it to $15,000.
In an article in The Times yesterday on Vy Higginsen, a writer and radio-television personality, the name of the magazine she publishes was given incorrectly. The correct name is Unique NY.

Margaret Saunders is "most definitely... glad to be back" at work at the General Motors plant in Tarrytown. For Ralph DeFalco, above, being out of work "was a struggle." David Davenport had help from his sister when his money ran out and vows to repay her once his financial situation improves.

Laid-Off G.M. Workers Back on Jobs in Tarrytown

TARRYTOWN, N.Y., Oct. 6—Hundreds of cars in bright shades of blue, green and yellow were rolling off the assembly line yesterday in the big General Motors plant here on the banks of the Hudson. Accompanied by the roar of motors, a steady line of automobile bodies—suspended from conveyors—moved through the plant as men in blue coveralls installed seats, tightened bolts and checked wiring. For many of the workers, it was the first time they had had a steady job since they were laid off almost two years ago, and spirits were high. "I'm more than thrilled," said Robert Joyner, a slender man with a wide smile. "It was rough out there. To be back at work is a blessing." This week, Mr. Joyner, along with 1,500 of the 2,000 laid-off workers, was back on the assembly line. In November 1974, when the employees were told that, because of the oil embargo and slump in car sales, their jobs had been temporarily eliminated, most thought they would be back in a few weeks. None expected to be out of work for almost two years. Nothing Left for Falls For the first six months after the layoff, the General Motors employees received weekly payments from the company's supplemental benefit fund. Then they went onto straight unemployment payments. When those benefits ran out, most had not yet found steady work. Mr. Joyner, whose unemployment benefits expired last January, found through friends, a few part-time jobs doing painting and furniture moving. With that income, and his wife's salary as a file clerk in a bank, he managed to buy groceries and pay the rent, but there was nothing left for frills. His wife, Mrs. Joyner said, "I know exactly how I felt, not being able to take her out to the movies, to buy her a dress or a pair of shoes." "But she never pressed me for it," Mr. Joyner said. "She just said: 'We'll wait until times get better.' She came through like a champ." It was the help of wives and relatives, several men said, that got them through the two lean years. David Davenport, a 40-year-old who had worked for General Motors for seven years before the layoff, shares an apartment in Mount Vernon with his sister. When Mr. Davenport's benefits ran out and he could not find work, his sister paid for the rent and food. "I'll make that back up to her once I get straightened out," said Mr. Davenport, who was back on the line this week. For one 33-year-old employee, Ralph DeFalco, the layoff was a chance to fulfill a dream. Two months after he lost his job as an apprentice toolmaker, he enrolled as a full-time student at Westchester Community College. His $350 tuition, $210 monthly rent and living expenses for himself, his wife and two children were paid with unemployment checks, food stamps and finally, a $234 bimonthly grant from the Human Resources Administration. When he was called back to work this month, he was only 10 credits short of an associate degree in mechanical engineering. He plans to take evening classes and finish by spring. "It's amazing how I got as far as I did," Mr. DeFalco said this week, taking a break from the assembly line, where he had been checking wiring systems. He added, with a grin, that "it was a struggle." "Now that I look back," he said, "I think I need a rest." Several of 1,800 Are Women Of the new and recalled 1,800 employees who reported for work this week, several are women. One, Margaret Saunders, 39 years old, had worked for General Motors for five years before the layoff, assembling ash trays and putting locks on glove-compartment doors. Separated from her husband and living in an apartment in White Plains, Mrs. Saunders supports her two teenage children, contributes to the living expenses of her mother in Virginia and is sending her 18-year-old son to college at an annual cost of $2,700. After months of fruitlessly looking for work and giving up hope of ever being rehired by G.M., Mrs. Saunders moved in with her mother and found a job, at a lower salary, with an electronics company in Virginia. When she was called back to General Motors, she returned without hesitation. Being out of work was hard, she said, as she lit a cigarette and prepared to leave the plant for the day. "I couldn't pay bills like I should, but I made it," she said. "And I most definitely am glad to be back."

Neighborhoods: Greeks in Bay Ridge

By MARCIA CHAMBERS

The quiet streets and comfortable homes of Bay Ridge that in past decades attracted Scandinavians, Irish and Italians are now luring increasing numbers of Greeks to that tranquil corner of Brooklyn. No one knows just how many Greek families have moved to Bay Ridge in the past decade. The Greek-American community here is not as large as the one in Astoria, Queens, the largest in the city. "But we're getting there," said one Greek-elder who has lived in Bay Ridge since 1965. In the last two years at least 5,000 Greeks have settled here, increasing the Greek population to between 35,000 to 50,000, according to various estimates. On the basis of these figures, Greeks constitute 28 to 40 percent of the area's residents. Real estate brokers of Greek extraction say Greek-American families are snapping up pre-World War II one- and two-family brick houses on clean, tree-lined streets as fast as they can raise a down payment, which often is $20,000. "They're going hog wild buying property," said the Rev. Constantine Xanthakis, who as pastor of the Holy Cross Greek Orthodox Church presides over a thriving parish at 8401 Ridge Boulevard, 2 blocks from Shore Road with its exquisite view of the Verazano-Narrows Bridge. Have Faith in Real Estate "Greeks are domestic minded," they put their value and faith in immovable property," Father Xanthakis said in an interview the other day as he showed a visitor architectural plans for a proposed $1 million cultural and educational center scheduled to be completed in two years. Bay Ridge, one of the few Republican strongholds in the city (it voted 3 to 1 for Richard M. Nixon in 1972 and regularly sends one of the five Republicans in the borough to the City Council) is also one of the last middle class, almost completely white areas in Brooklyn. Less than 1 per cent of the population is black or Spanish-speaking. And from all accounts, Bay Ridge intends to keep it that way. Its politics are conservative. It sends Republican-Conservatives to the State Senate and State Assembly. An index of their conservatism is provided by the New York Civil Liberties Union, which in 1976, gave local legislators ratings ranging from 6 to 25 percent. In the last decade, many of the children of Scandinavian and Irish descent have moved, many to Staten Island and the suburbs. About 20 percent of the 126,000 residents are over 60 and live in rent-controlled apartments in four- and six-story brick buildings. Norwegian was once offered as a language course at Bay Ridge High School. No more. In the last two years, however, Fort Hamilton High School, which fronts on the Narrows on Shore Road, has offered bilingual academic courses in Greek as well as a course in modern Greek. In the commercial section— from Third Avenue to Fifth Avenue and the main thoroughfare, 88th Street—scores of small shops cater to the new arrivals, Syrians, Lebanese, Chinese, and Greeks—and to the old-timers. On many blocks there is an Irish bar, a luncheonette (often owned by Greeks) and an Italian bakery. Bay Ridge residents are resolutely middle class. They respect family, education and property. They believe in hard work, cleanliness and they are committed to their church and their compatriots. There are about 100 active civil, social and ethnic organizations, which wield considerable power and prod politicians and the police when the occasion arises. At the moment, the citizens of Bay Ridge are worried about crime, particularly that for granted in other Brooklyn neighborhoods, but not in Bay Ridge, where there are few cases of rape, murder or arson. But in Bay Ridge, crimes against property strike at the heart of the community. And so, 100 volunteers, trained by security agencies, High burglary rates, the police, will soon embark in unmarked cars on nightly neighborhood surveillance. Still, most people in Bay Ridge feel safe walking alone on the streets. Safety, and its corollary—"A good place to bring up children"—is one reason Greeks are moving here. Mihail Emanoilidou left Athens more than two years ago, and after six months in Manhattan, he sent for his wife and two daughters and started anew in Bay Ridge. Mr. Emanoilidou, 40 years old, said he was attracted by the clean neighborhood, the nearby public school for Anastasia, 10 and Katherine, 7½, the Greek Orthodox Church and the safe streets. The family lives in an apartment that adjoins a grocery store. Mr. Emanoilidou was chased the house and the store. How was he able to afford it? "Hard work and an excellent job," he said through Father Xanthakis' interview. Mr. Emanoilidou's problem is learning English so that his daughters now flourish. But he understands questions and said in English: "I managed to buy his home a 'Big mortgage.'" A short, stocky man with brown hair and an easy smile, Emanoilidou is confident he is a go of his business. But since he is on a side street on Bay Ridge, he has been touch-and-go his 14-hour days. Mrs. Emanoilidou works as a seamstress in the "Sofonias" in Bay Ridge, but his voice, while worried, prides in the ownership of it. The Emanoilidou home is late, but Mrs. Emanoilidou about the plagues of the New housekeeper—cockroaches. "It took eight months to get it out," she said. "Terrible." He clad in a black head shawl, dress, sat in the living room and interview and said nothing, sitting the family. Anastasia, now in the 10th grade, learned English in less than a year. Her mother, she said, made and translate and write "Greek sentences" at night, watched television nightly, learn new words. Her teacher, School 102, she said. "Teacher repeats everything," Anastasia said. After school, her sister attend the Greek church. Basil Capetanakis and Hionas, two of the dozen estate people in Bay Ridge, the new arrivals and their independent homeowners. "We get hard-working people. They make a few dollars and put it in the bank. They stack together, one Greek or uncle or cousin buy," Mr. Capetanakis said. Houses that five years ago $45,000 now go for $60,000, the brokers said. Customers Change Along Shore Road, the "Coast," as the police call it, for one family home with lawns begin at $125,000. The scarce that two Greek families purchased their homes from Long ago, said John Uhr, his candy store on 89th Third Avenue in Bay Ridge ago. "I sold Italian, German, dish-language newspapers," he said. "Some have moved died." Most are now simply third generation Americans. One of the few candy stores in the area with a few creams are 30 cents. Mr. Uhr the name of every child who after school to purchase per candy—now two cents each. "We see the kids grow away, return to visit." He becca, nodded. "Then one day into the store and say to kids, 'this is where daddy be when he was your age.'" Mr. Uhr delighted with arrivals, the Greeks. Their family commitments of times past.

Metropolitan Briefs

Connecticut Urges End To Use of Blue Laws Connecticut's blue laws are still on the books, but the state's Chief Attorney's office has advised prosecutors to stop enforcing them. The advisory was issued after a Court of Common Pleas judge in New Britain called the laws unconstitutional in dismissing charges of illegal Sunday sales against the manager of a Two Guys department store in Newington. Although the lower court decision is not binding on other courts, John F. Mulcahy Jr., the deputy chief state attorney, said the advisory was being issued because "we feel it is now impossible, and perhaps improper, to successfully prosecute blue-law violations. Youth Held in 4 Deaths A youth has been arrested in the deaths of four Stamford, Conn., teenagers in a car crash near an illegal drag race in New Haven on Sept. 24, the police said. Gary Ellsworth, 18 years old, of New Haven, was charged with four counts of first-degree manslaughter and a single count of first-degree assault. Police said Mr. Ellsworth's car had smashed into a small foreign car carrying the youths, causing it to burst into flames. Four occupants died and a fifth was seriously injured. The police said the incident had taken place on Long Wharf Drive near the site of an illegal car race.

Mineola Court Test Set The Mineola Teachers Association will appear in State Supreme Court in Mineola, L. I., to show cause why the court should not enjoin its strike against the school district over a contract dispute. The strike by 251 teachers continued for a second day with about 100 substitute teachers replacing those on strike. About 4,000 pupils attend six schools in the district. From the Police Blotter: A 30-year-old Brooklyn man was stabbed fatally outside an apartment at 465 Georgia Avenue in the East New York section while a neighbor who was visiting the tenant in the apartment also was stabbed by another man. The dead man was identified as Charles Daniels of 580 Stanley Avenue and Levi Lee, 18 years old, of 932 Dumont Avenue, was arrested for the homicide. The wounded man, John Payne, 20, was admitted in fair condition to Kings County Hospital. Armed bank robbers almost $6,000 from banks in Manhattan and Queens. The Chemical Bank branch at 100 Park Avenue, at 41st Street, was robbed of $1,649 by a lone gunman. The Manufacturer's Hanover Trust Company bank in White-stone at 19-19 Francis Lewis Boulevard was held up by two men for $4,000. At the Chase Manhattan Bank branch at 726 Madison Avenue, at 64th Street, a man jumped over the counter, took $5,900 and fled.

Women to Be Taught 'Men's Work'

WHITE PLAINS, Oct. 7—That Westchester County Parkway policeman pulling you over for speeding on the Taconic State Parkway may be a Westchester County Parkway policewoman in the near future. Similarly, a woman may be restoring service atop a telephone pole in front of your house or delivering milk around the back at dawn. Westchester, it was announced today, has been awarded a $400,000 grant from the United States Department of Labor "to prepare women to work in nontraditional jobs—those formerly considered solely male occupations," according to County Executive Alfred E. DeBello, who might be considered to be holding one of those jobs. The object of the program, he explained at a news conference, is to train women for the "nontraditional" jobs and then to help them find work in the private or public sector. Assistance will begin with on-the-job or skill training, and then move to counseling, job development and employment workshop experience at a women's center in White Plains. Nontraditional jobs, according to Keith Drake, director of the county's Office of Manpower Planning, include auto mechanic, electrician, carpenter, mason and auditor. "Bookkeepers traditionally are women, but auditors are men for some reason," he said. Mr. DeBello said that "we want to encourage women to expand their job-hunting horizons." Their unemployment rate is equal to men's, Mr. Drake said, and it may even be higher, because the figures do not include those who have dropped out of the job market or who intend to enter it. Mr. DeBello said that "we should be able to help about 100 women in the experimental program," which will be monitored by the county's Task Force on Women and the United States Labor Department. Mr. Drake said he would begin conferring tomorrow with potential employees, including the county itself.

Court Finds Stavisky-Goodman Law Never in Effect

By TOM GOLDSTEIN
The Appellate Division in Manhattan unanimously ruled yesterday that the Stavisky-Goodman Law, which had already been declared invalid by a lower-court judge, never took effect because Governor Carey's veto of the bill last spring "was never legally overridden."

The five-member court said that the State Senate had no constitutional right to vote a second time to override the Governor's veto of the controversial bill, which was designed to require an increase in education spending in New York City by as much as $150 million.

"The decision restores Governor Carey's proper place in history," said Bernard Richland, the city's Corporation Counsel, who argued the case on behalf of the city, which had strenuously opposed the law. "He is not the only Governor in the past century whose veto has been overridden. As a matter of law, the veto was sustained."

No Comment From Board
The Board of Education had no comment on the two-page decision by the state's intermediate appellate court, but it is expected to appeal to the Court of Appeals, the state's highest court.

Democrat-Liberal of Queens, a co-sponsor of the bill with Senator Roy M. Goodman, Republican-Liberal of Manhattan. "One million school children will suffer because the court did not have the courage to do the right thing," he said.

The law was initially declared invalid last Aug. 23 by State Supreme Court Justice Abraham Gellinoff, who found that the law was too vague as to be unenforceable, that it had violated the State Constitution's home-rule section and that it was defective because of the procedures used by the Senate.

In its opinion, the Appellate Division dealt only with the procedural aspects of the law. "Under the circumstances, we deem it unnecessary to treat with the further arguments raised on this appeal," the court said.

3,500 Teachers Dismissed
Last April 8, the Senate failed to override the Governor's veto by the required two-thirds majority. Five days later, a new vote was taken, and the motion to override the veto carried by the necessary majority—the first time veto was overridden in 104 years.

Since the State Constitution and the rules of the Senate permit only one reconsideration of a bill, the court found "the second reconsideration of the bill by the Senate was therefore a nullity."

The five judges who decided the case were Harold Stevens, Arthur Markewich, Myles J. Lane, Emilio Nunez and J. Robert Lynch.

The day that Justice Gellinoff handed down his ruling, the Board of Education sent out dismissal notices to 3,500 city teachers whose jobs it had been hoping to save with the extra money the Stavisky-Goodman law would have provided.

Those plans to layoff teachers had been drawn up before the decision—in line with the limited amount of money Mayor Beame had allotted to it in defiance of the law.

"The enforcement of this law would have seriously jeopardized the city's economic recovery and thus endanger the viability of the very school system it sought to assist," the Mayor said yesterday.

"We will continue to work together toward improving the quality of education for our children. However, we must insure the city's financial problem is not worsened to the detriment of all our citizens."

Jersey Will Seek Overhaul of Rating By Auto Insurers

Special to The New York Times
TRENTON, Oct. 7—New Jersey's Commissioner of Insurance called today for major revisions in the classification and territory system used by insurance companies in determining the cost of automobile coverage.

The Commissioner, James J. Sheeran, said that companies currently used 217 classifications, such as the sex, experience and age of the driver, as well as the type of vehicle, its use and the number of miles driven.

In addition, he said, the companies have divided the state into 27 territories and charge higher premiums for persons in urban areas.

"There are many inequities in the present system," Commissioner Sheeran said at a hearing on a request for a 35 percent rate increase. The request was made by the Insurance Service Office on behalf of 230 insurance companies in New Jersey.

"Many people are upset because they are paying rates that are not based on their driving record but because of the classification in which they are placed and the territory in which they live," he said.

The Commissioner said he was asking the major rating organization to "justify the industry's classification practices or eliminate them if they cannot be sustained."

Building Costs Down on Building in Suburbs

By ALAN S. OSER
 BROOKLYN, N.Y.—In this town in the hills and farms Binghamton, in south-central New York State, home building peaks and valleys, says Edward McGowan. "We just kind of

The attitudes and approach to how and why suburban changing in those areas is still possible to produce homes for a mass market. The old down costs without loss to the competition—manufactured housing. So far, it is still able to offer priced houses for under price that 60 percent to 70 the people in his area, he found.

In the flooring, use the subfloor, using a grove system to glue the joists below. Then string to cover a floor that

Edward W. McGowan

These and other techniques were worked out by the National Association of Home Builders in conjunction with the Government, he said, but many builders adhere to old methods because buyers prefer them. "You can use less material and actually have better quality."

One significant saving is achieved by "bringing the house out of the ground" enough to cut the cost of concrete in the foundation. This works as long as the house is deep enough so that frost can't get under it, he said. The result is that light and air can get into the "basement" level down only a half flight of stairs instead of a full flight, creating a new living level. The garage is part of that level, saving the cost of a separate garage.

Only these methods, Mr. McGowan said, make it possible for him to compete with the producers of manufactured housing, his chief competitor in the medium-price market. The lowest-price form of manufactured housing is the mobile home, but that is a different market. Mr. McGowan's competition is the manufactured unit that is brought by truck in two pieces to a site purchased by the buyer, and then connected to the town water and sewage system. Several producers of this housing are based in Pennsylvania, and it is increasingly to be found in rural America. For a growing town, it can be an expensive form of development in the long run, making services more expensive to provide and promoting less-than-rational patterns of land development.

Whatever the form of housing, all producers must contend with the fact that the home buyer in Broome County, to whom Mr. McGowan tries to sell, is a "cautious, conservative fellow."

"It took me 10 years to build up people's confidence here," the builder said. "Nowadays the banks won't even talk to a new builder." One national building company had to resort to granting second mortgages to buyers to sell out a development of 40 houses, he said.

But in Maplewood II, most houses are presold before they are built. The buyer selects one of several available models, obtains a mortgage commitment from the bank as construction proceeds. Buyers take title when the first advance is made, and are left with a 30-year mortgage upon completion.

Even at the height of the recession there was a market in Broome County, Mr. McGowan said, although downpayment requirements were raised from the typical 20 percent to as high as 40 percent. The only government program he uses are guaranteed loans obtained through the Farmers Home Administration, which make it possible to build for a lower income level. "If we can keep the price under $25,000, many people will qualify."

"We're the new-style builder," Mr. McGowan said. He does a $2-million-a-year business that includes remodeling and roofing as well as home building. His offices are in a large remodeled house off Route 12, and the rooms display interior home-styling products that the buyer can order. "We are merchandisers, we deal with the customer."

Charges Are Dismissed Against Mother of Infant Who Was Killed by a Dog

Upon the recommendation of the Manhattan District Attorney's office, a State Supreme Court justice yesterday dismissed homicide charges against Joanne Bashold, whose infant daughter was killed by her dog.

District Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau said he had requested dismissal after an investigation found "the defendant had never been involved in a similar situation and had no reason to know this tragedy would occur."

After hearing statements by Alan Broomer, an assistant district attorney, and Elliot Cook of the Legal Aid Society, who praised the prosecution's handling of the case, Justice Robert Haft dismissed the charges against Miss Bashold.

Miss Bashold, 24 years old, was not in the courtroom at the time. She had been waiting for more than an hour in Mr. Cook's office before she heard the news.

Miss Bashold, who has consistently refused to speak with reporters about the case, was reported to have cried when she heard of the judge's decision. Mr. Cook said that when she had been told that reporters wanted to speak with her and that one newspaper had even offered money, she replied:

"No amount of money is worth it to me to relieve the horror. It is an agony I will have the rest of my life."

Miss Bashold, who lived alone with her German Shepherd at 319 East 105th Street, gave birth at Bellevue Hospital on Sept. 1. Four days later, she was discharged from the hospital, but it was too late in the evening for her to retrieve money that she had left with the hospital's cashier. The following morning, she returned to the hospital, leaving the infant alone with the dog. When she returned, the child was dead.

TAX-ABATEMENT PLAN VOTED FOR PROJECTS

Aid for Mitchell-Lama Tenants Is Approved by Board of Estimate

By CHARLES KAISER

After a stormy afternoon session, the Board of Estimate voted unanimously yesterday to approve Mayor Beame's proposal to restore or continue tax abatements worth $7.1 million to 60 Mitchell-Lama housing projects throughout the city.

The vote came after the Bronx Borough President, Robert Abrams, his arms and voice rising in unison, accused city officials of creating "a climate of hysteria" by urging the passage of the bill yesterday, barely a week after details of the proposal were disclosed.

Under the Mitchell-Lama program, the city borrows money to build housing for middle-income tenants. Residents of the buildings, faced with rising rents or carrying charges, have become one of the most vocal and highly organized constituencies in the city.

Residents at Hearing

Earlier in yesterday's session, the Budget Director had explained to the 50 Mitchell-Lama residents in the audience that the Mayor's proposal would restore the projects to their highest previous level of abatement.

The abatements for some projects had been reduced from their original levels, and those projects had begun to pay taxes on higher assessments. Under the Mayor's proposal, the extra taxes already collected will not be refunded, but the projects that paid them will be given tax credits to apply to tax bills issued after July 1, 1987. That is when the city's three-year financial plan is scheduled to end.

Another item before the board concerned a petition of the American Television and Communications Corporation for authorization to operate a "closed-

Teacher Will Appeal Ouster Over Nudity

POMONA, N.J., Oct. 7 (UPI) — A former professor at Stockton State College who has been discharged for inviting students to his home for classes in the nude said he had not given up efforts to get his job back.

The professor, Jack Barense, 47 years old, said today he would appeal a ruling by a state agency that had dismissed his complaint charging the college with job discrimination.

His case was dismissed yesterday by the State Public Employment Relations Commission. The agency, which mediates labor disputes involving government employees, ruled that the complaint had been submitted one year after the filing deadline.

Mr. Barense was notified in November 1974 that he was being dismissed by the small state college, which is near Atlantic City.

Mr. Barense, who works as a local coordinator for the American Civil Liberties Union, said he had conducted workshops as part of a course entitled "Sexism as a Social Problem" so that students could see how they reacted to nudity under various circumstances.

the eighth or ninth Century B.C.; Shakespeare folios; a copper globe that dates from the 16th century.

Father of Other Centers

The library estimates that about 40 percent of its works are not to be found anywhere else. From its vast collection it has spun off or developed the other major research library centers: the performing arts research center at Lincoln Center, the Schomburg center for research in black culture at 103 West 135th Street and the newspaper and patents collections at 521 West 43d Street.

All told, these research centers, plus the central one, have more than five million works in more than 3,000 languages and dialects.

The Main Attraction

To most of those who work beneath the high ceilings next to Bryant Park, the main reading room—Room 315—is the main attraction. There they go through catalogues—either card or computer-produced books—and fill out the call slips for the books they study at tables with green-shaded lamps. This is the general research and humanities division.

The catalogue of some 10 million cards is indicative of the seven floors of stacks that go deep below the sidewalk level to the base on the old Croton Reservoir.

Completely overshadowed by research facilities is the circulating library on the ground floor, and the fact that from this building the branch libraries of Manhattan, the Bronx and Staten Island are administered.

The influence of the library has reached around the world. When the American community in Paris made elaborate plans to celebrate the Bicentennial on July 4, no Colonial music could be found. The library here found the scores, copied them and sent them to Paris.

Medicaid Mismanagement Blamed by a House Panel For Crippling of Children

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 (UPI)—Mismanagement in the Medicaid program allows the crippling, retardation and death of thousands of poor children who are entitled to help, a House subcommittee reported today.

The report, approved by the subcommittee on a 10-to-1 vote with only Representative James M. Collins, Republican of Texas, dissenting, was the second Congressional attack on Medicaid practices in recent weeks.

The subcommittee chairman, Representative John E. Moss, Democrat of California, said:

"The subcommittee finds that mismanagement by H.E.W. [the Department of Health, Education and Welfare] of this program has caused unnecessary crippling, retardation, or even death of thousands of children."

The report, titled "Shortchanging Children," said that 12.9 million persons under the age of 21 years were eligible for medical examinations and treatment in 1975 under a law that was to have taken effect in 1963.

But of these, 10.9 million of the eligible children were left unexamined and untreated, the report said.

Based on testimony at subcommittee hearings, the panel's staff estimated that about one million of the unscrutinized children would have been found to need treatment for a perceptual deficiency such as a significant hearing defect; 650,000 would need treatment for eye defects; 770,000 would have a hearing disability; and 435,000 would need treatment for iron deficiency anemia.

The report blames H.E.W. "maladministration," including laxity in issuing program regulations, fragmented services and cumbersome procedures for penalizing laggard states.

It said that only nine states were able to report to the subcommittee the number of children treated as a result of routine health examinations. These were Colorado, Delaware, Hawaii, Idaho, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Vermont and Virginia.

"I have to be optimistic," says Mr. Henderson.

CUBA SAYS FENCING TEAM DIED IN BARBADOS

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados, Oct. 7 (UPI)—The 16 members of Cuba's ship-fencing team died yesterday noon in a crash of a Cubana Airtur that killed 78 persons, the Cuban ment-controlled press—against Latina reported today.

A team of Cuban aviation arrived here today to help the authorities in checking the possible sabotage. The crash, headed by Jamaica and Havana into the Caribbean three miles had 20 minutes after it took Bridgetown's airport.

Barbadian authorities did not public the identities of any of the passengers or crew members, or pilot, Wilfredo Pérez, but said the entire 16-member national team died in the crash.

The agency said, in a special monitored in Caracas, that they were going home after winning fourth Central American and title in a tournament in the last week.

Among others killed were members of North Korean Communist visiting the West Indies.

The Cuban aviation experts aid divers and security pens investigating the crash and crash third Cubana Airlines-related Caribbean in three months.

Tragedy and Comedy Open New Haven

By MEL GUSSOW

USUALLY, New Haven was the tryout ground for musicals, comedies and even dramas would find their strengths—and presumably discover their weaknesses—in New Haven before coming to New York. After opening night at the Shubert Theater, the actor and friends from New York would drift to the Hotel to wait for reviews. Depending on the results, frantic rewrites might start immediately. The hotel is closed and only rarely does the pre-Broadway tryout—although there are such as Neil Simon and Richard Rodgers, who persistently still test their shows in New Haven, the Shubert presents post-Broadway at the same time that commercial theater has been in New Haven, institutional theater has risen. First-rate, solidly established regional theaters—the Long Wharf Theater and the Yale Theater, each of which begins its season to start with the American premiere of Michael Crichton's comedy, "Alphabetical Order" and Yale's production of "Julius Caesar," by Robert Drivas and Ron Leibman.

New Haven theater not only satisfies a local audience, but has acted as a pipeline to New York. Seasons, Long Wharf presented—before the war—Rabe's "Steinbock," David Storey's "Room," Peter Nichols's "The National," and Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!"

New Yorkers, who want to keep ahead of the theater, now keep their eyes on Long Wharf and Yale. In particular interest in the company's three seasons: "Alphabetical Order," about the complicated relationship between a father and his son.

Tenor Has a Change of Voice

By DONAL HENAHAN

LUCIANO FAVAROTTI, the heroically large tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, is good-humored about his bulk, but not really forthcoming. If you ask how much he weighs, now that he has lost 25 pounds on a diet, he replies, "Less than before." And how much did he weigh before? "More than now." He proudly displays his diet chart, which lists only these items for the evening meal: 100 grams tuna fish, 150 grams tomato, 30 grams bread, 1 peach. Looking more like Falstaff or Nero than T. S. Eliot's Prufrock ("Do I dare to eat a peach?"), the tenor sits imperiously in a togalike bathrobe in his hotel suite on Central Park South and nurses the last few ounces of red wine in a small chalice, his allotment for the day.

But the ebullient Italian tenor, who takes on the strenuous role of Manrico on Monday night, when the Metropolitan Opera opens its season with "Il Trovatore," is trying to put on weight and take it off at the same time.

While struggling to melt away bodily poundage, Mr. Pavarotti is moving into a heavier vocal class. He has never attempted so strenuous a part at the Met before. A light tenor until now (he is 41 years old), he is making a move that many lyric tenors attempt as they mature. The move is never without dangers, however, and Mr. Pavarotti knows it better than most singers seem to.

"If I feel Manrico is too much for me, I will not make the first performance," the tenor told a visitor the other day. "I quit." He smiled as he said it, plainly feeling little self-doubt. "I have already worked on Manrico a lot, you know. I sang it in San Francisco. To change this way, the voice must grow step by step, and it is already six years that I have studied 'Il Trovatore.' This Christmas I will do 'Tosca' in Chicago, and next winter I do 'Turandot.' I will do 'Aida,' top, but when and where I don't know."

Mr. Pavarotti says he has no goals beyond the type of middle-heavyweight tenor role typified by Cavardossi.

FROM ASIA

A new show of rarely seen art has just opened at gallery, 112 East 64th St. (at 210). "Southeast Asian Arts 109 pieces made in the 17th and 18th centuries from Japan and Cambodia. The attention paid to detail in the work is often beyond compare. There are also some fine examples made by the Chinese in Thailand—you'll see what that's all about. The work is on the second floor of a narrow building that is a Society. Admission is $1.50 for two ear-Mondays to Saturdays, 10 to 5 P.M.; Sundays, 1 to 5 P.M. on Thursdays.

ONE REVIVED

Does all right for a new 20th-century success, but about it. But in the meantime stand up as well as Jonson, who had "Volpone" in 1606 and has been revived for several hundred years. It is now in revival at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, 346 West 20th Street. The company devotes itself to the work of Shakespeare. This version, directed by Peter Hall, is a straightforward, but with a comic touch to the evils of greed, lust and ambition. It will be presented on Friday and Saturday, 8 P.M. (and Sunday, 3 P.M.). Admission: $2.50.

STAGE IN PRINCETON

The McCarter Theater Company has just begun its new season in its 1,070-seat theater in Princeton, N.J. In the season that recently expired, the company was in Bicentennial step with the nation, staging American works old and new. This season will be more universal, even though the first play really comes out of the domestic mold: Tennessee Williams's "A Streetcar Named Desire." The revival, under the direction of Michael Kahn, the McCarter's producing director, has Kenneth Welsh as Stanley Kowalski and Shirley Knight as Blanche Du Bois. Showtime is 8:30 tonight and tomorrow and 7:30 Sunday (plays Thursdays to Sundays, through Oct. 24). Admission: $4 to $7.95. The McCarter is on University Place and College Road; take Alexander Road exit from Route 1. Next play will be Shaw's "Major Barbara." Information: (609) 921-8700. Street parking.

Saturday

FLORA AND FAUNA

The New York Botanical Garden and the Bronx Zoo are neighbors on Pelham Parkway and Southern Boulevard, and they are crossing the road between them Saturday and Sunday to create a "Flora and Fauna Festival" in the Bronx. At 2 P.M. each day three camels, a donkey and a pony cart full of smaller creatures will parade around the botanical garden, where the wildlife normally runs to the zoo and squirrels. During both days from 10 A.M. to 4 P.M., this autumn harvest celebration will extend into both institutions: nature walks at the garden, animal tours at the zoo. Also included are puppet shows, cider press, scarecrow making, orchid plant sale, scarecrow making, orchid viewing and films. There's a special festival at the Zoo Pub. There's a special festival ticket that admits you to the zoo, where there is an admission charge, and to the botanical garden, where there is none, and it gets you into all festival events at both places. It costs $1, but it is 50 cents for under-12's. Parking costs $1.50 at both locations. Information: 220-8777.

ONCE AROUND THE BAY

There will be a big sail in New York Harbor on Saturday, when about 35 boats are expected to show up for the 10th annual Schooner Race for the Mayor's Cup. The race will begin at 10 A.M. from the neighborhood of the Statue of Liberty and, depending upon wind and tide, skim up the Hudson River to off the West 40's, perhaps to off the West 70's and then return. These are boats that measure from 35 to 100 feet, not the tall ships that dropped by in July. But they always provide a feast for the eyes, and you can position your eyes at the Battery for a good view. Or, even better, you can buy passage on a spectator boat, a ferry, that will leave from South Ferry at 9:30 A.M. Tickets cost $6 ($3 for under-12's) and may be purchased after 9 A.M. The boat will return between 2 and 4:30 P.M., after the race is over. The race is sponsored by the South Street Seaport Museum, and you may telephone it for information: 786-9042.

WOODS WALK ON S.I.

There has been a lot of walking in Staten Island lately, what with tours of this and that. Local cobblers will presumably welcome yet another foot-slog through the borough. This one will be through the hilly, wooded country now known as the Clary Pit area. This will be an 85-acre state park eventually, and an organization known as Protectors of Fine Oak Woods wants to show people what it looks like now so that they may recall it later. The walk steps off at 10 A.M. on Saturday and runs until 2 P.M. You'll see trees, ponds, vegetation, all untouched by human hands—yet, rain or shine. From Manhattan, take the 8:30 Staten Island ferry, which gets you to the 113 bus in St. George. Ask the driver to let you out at Clay Pit Road. You'll be met. For cars, go to Arthur Kill Road and Clay Pit Road. Bring lunch and something to drink. Information: 381-8571.

THROUGH THE NIGHT

If you have never been able to get enough of jazz, you might find yourself finally surfeited at Central Synagogue, the imposing house of worship on Lexington Avenue and 53rd Street, Sunday night. A jazz marathon of sorts, entitled "All Nite Soul," gets under way at 5 P.M. and is scheduled to throb through the night until 5 A.M. More than 100 jazzmen—and women—are expected to participate in this year's program. Among them: Ruth Brisbane, Billy Taylor, Joe Newman, Russell Procope, Stella Marrs. And others, as well as unscheduled drop-in guests. The Rev. John Gensel, who serves as pastor to jazz people at St. Peter's Lutheran Church (now being rebuilt across the street), will be the master of ceremonies. This year's run-on is the 11th anniversary of the night when Mr. Gensel and a group of musicians began this form of religious worship. Coffee and cake served through the night. A $1 contribution is suggested. Information: 753-4669.

FRED GWYNNE

THAT'S NOTHING, HAVE YOU SEEN WHAT THE OTHER CRITICS ARE SAYING ABOUT OUR THREE PLAYS?...

DIANE LADD

The plays are so pulsating with accuracy that their greatest glory is truth—the kind you see in mirrors and childhood memory. The heart of this kind of theatrical experience is life itself. Diane Ladd as Lu Ann is so identified in the soul that it is hard to tell just where the playwright leaves off and the actress begins. Not since Kim Jones first burst upon the scene has such deeply felt honesty poured from an actress. She turns the stage into an atmosphere of magnetic personal triumph. It is one of the acting sensations of the season. The ensemble work is magnificent. Fred Gwynne turns in a remarkable performance as an irascible colonel. The Trilogy is a remarkable achievement of Alan Schneider's direction and perfect Texas imagery. Jones' beautiful, profound, texturally rich body of work is important meaningful theatre. It enriches our culture, broadens our horizons and raises the level of Broadway several notches."

—REX REED, N.Y. DAILY NEWS

...has a distinct talent, the ability in particular to sound on stage the way people sound in life. These evenings can be recommended as an intelligent and truthful evening in the theatre. Go and see them. Jones must be hailed as a new voice in American drama. As Lu Ann, the survivor of the Lverties, tragedies and small despairs, Diane Ladd is splendid. Fred Gwynne as the colonel, grumpy and yet credible, was simply magnificent."

—CLIVE BARNES, N.Y. TIMES

...is a gifted new American playwright. 'Lu Ann Hampton Lavery' is a wonderful, moving slice of life—yet it is uproariously funny. A play awash with the juices of life, with the comedy and tragedy of humanity, that is beautiful. An ensemble of perfect actors led by Diane Ladd in the title role, who is superb in the theatre that should not be missed."

—STEWART KLEIN, WNEW-TV

...is the finest drama to come to Broadway in two seasons. It abounds with earthy wisdom, insights and sensitivity. Lu Ann is played by Diane Ladd—an instant Tony nominee for her star performance, equally convincing at every age and in every mood. It's a play to laugh and smile and cry. See it!"

—RICHARD SCHOLEM, GREATER N.Y. RADIO

...interested in original theatre should see these three plays."

...full-length plays—all of them winners! Preston Jones has come up with something fresh and exciting and very touching—a lasting piece of American theatre."

—TOM PRIDEAUX, SMITHSONIAN MAGAZINE

...triumph! 'Lu Ann Hampton Lavery Oberhas' has come to town and it is a lovely one. It has a wonderful ear for the way people speak. Lu Ann is brought to life superbly by Diane Ladd. Alan Schneider has directed the play superbly."

—ALLAN WALLACH, NEWSDAY

...theatricality! A Texas triple-header!"

—TIME MAGAZINE

...lucky to have Preston Jones among us because he is able to make us laugh."

—BRENDAN GILL, THE NEW YORKER

"Jones' plays are genuinely popular work—which makes them look a bit odd on a Broadway used to pretentiousness and gimmickry. In the moral desert of the theatre, Jones is a drink of branch water. The ensemble is admirable. Diane Ladd gives a performance that would be hard for any actress to beat. Fred Gwynne's colonel gets laughs by capturing the discontinuities of a strong but shattered man—a moving image of ravaged gallantry."

—JACK KRULL, NEWSWEEK

"Jones has opened a door on a fascinating world we haven't seen in the theatre for many years—genuinely original people, alive and kicking up the dust in this rugged new landscape. You just can't resist saying, 'howdy!'"

—CUE MAGAZINE

"Fred Gwynne, as the old colonel, was simply marvelous!"

—VIRGIL SCUDDER, WWS

"Very fine and very funny plays of genuine importance. The cast is remarkably good."

—HAROLD CLURMAN, THE NATION

"The most promising American playwright to come along in two or three decades."

—SATURDAY REVIEW

"A 'Texas Trilogy' is among the most stunning achievements in the history of American theatre. These are plays with roots that penetrate into the American soil and soul. As Lu Ann Hampton, Diane Ladd is the quintessential survivor. As Col. J. C. Kinkaid, Fred Gwynne is the apotheosis of American old age."

—CLIFFORD A. RIDLEY, THE NATIONAL OBSERVER

"Enthralling! Three enchanting full-length comedy-dramas!"

—VARIETY

"It seems that as long as I can remember, I've been awaiting, like the Old Testament Jews, the Messiah, the coming of a new playwright with a true sound. A playwright not hung up on sex, despair, social criticism or his mother. A playwright, in short, with nothing to plead for but life. I've found him in Preston Jones, author of 'A Texas Trilogy.'"

—R. H. GARDNER, BALTIMORE SUN

"A rare theatre experience...three new, compelling, affirmative plays by a sensitive observer of the human comedy."

—RICHARD L. COE, WASHINGTON POST

"The Last Meeting of the Knights of the White Magnolia' is a winner. The knights are unforgettable. The oldest member is Colonel Kinkaid, a gaunt and senile veteran of the first world war. Fred Gwynne is splendid in this showy role. Refreshingly original in theme, a night to remember! 'The Oldest Living Graduate' is an extremely funny play and extremely touching with a magnificent performance by Fred Gwynne. Alan Schneider's masterly direction of all three plays cannot be over praised. 'Graduate,' a beautiful play, approaches the sublime and so does Gwynne."

—DOUGLAS WATT, N.Y. DAILY NEWS

"A masterpiece! 'Trilogy' rings a bell! A major new dramatist has arrived on the Broadway scene. A remarkable word magician, Jones knows how to skillfully mix comedy and tragedy. A richly textured work, 'Lu Ann' is a gem, universal in its appeal. Rarely has a writer used local dialect and idiom with such unerring finesse. His characters breathe life. They are not mere symbols. Diane Ladd is superb in the title role. Fred Gwynne is magnificent as the crotchety colonel. Director Alan Schneider has orchestrated beautifully. He has caught the humor as well as the pathos."

—EMORY LEWIS, THE RECORD

"A true first! We are in the presence of something genuinely new. Alan Schneider's work is nothing short of brilliant. Diane Ladd gives a bravura performance."

—JACQUES LE SOURD, WESTCHESTER GANNETT NEWSPAPERS

"Preston Jones is clearly and demonstrably a great American playwright."

—THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER

"Fred Gwynne is a sure contender for season-end acting honors!"

—WILLIAM GLOVER, ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Gwynne turns in a remarkable moving performance as the old colonel. Lee Richardson and Patricia Roe are brilliantly splendid, Henderson Forsythe and Patrick Hines are magnificent."

—WILLIAM A. RAIDY, NEWHOUSE NEWSPAPERS

"An invigorating night in Texas has blown in from the pen of Preston Jones, it is truly moving and most remarkable. Fred Gwynne is astounding in the title role."

Stage: Gelber's 'Rehearsal,' A Play Within a Play

Levels of Reality

JACK GELBER'S NEW PLAY, 'REHEARSAL,' directed by Jack Gelber; set supervision by Henry Miller; lighting by Edward M. Greenberg; production stage manager, Erny Gallo...

By CLIVE BARNES

'What is a play? How does it happen? What makes it work? These were the basic issues behind Jack Gelber's new play, which is called, beguilingly enough, 'Jack Gelber's New Play: Rehearsal.' It is directed by the author.

It is a play about a play, or at least about a play that was being rehearsed. The fictional author is a white ex-convict. His play is about 'a prison rebellion that doesn't work out.'

Mr. Gelber's purpose is very clear. He is fascinated by the machinery not only of playwriting but much more of the business of getting a play on. Here he is showing us the fashionable ex-con playwright, a writer who started work in prison showing life just as it is—the stage, as it is suggested, 'as a prison.'

The author will rewrite anything with a casual shrug of his shoulder. Mr. Gelber's playwright indeed even gets involved in the play itself, as an actor. Even more indeed, he finds himself playing in a male rape scene that he neither wrote, witnessed, nor envisaged.

Just as in his first and probably best-known play, 'The Connection,' Mr. Gelber is dealing with life. In that case it was the reality of drug addiction; so here he is dealing with the actual process of a play passing through its first read-through to production.

Martin Shakar plays the stage manager and Sam Schacht the director.

All of Mr. Gelber's points seem perfectly pertinent. The neophyte playwright writing of his jail experience could well have been picked up by Joseph Papp, but here he is being picked up by a woman called Arlene, who knows what makes Off Broadway—or is it on Broadway?—work, and a director called Ernst, who is so aggressive that even his cigarettes are afraid of him.

The play is neatly structured, and the idea is a good one. But unfortunately it is not particularly well-written. It neither has the raciness of vernacular speech nor perhaps the more measured tread permissible in dramatic literature.

Mr. Gelber is dealing with life. In that case it was the reality of drug addiction; so here he is dealing with the actual process of a play passing through its first read-through to production.

They Even Do the Hat Dance

By ANNA KISSELGOFF

The Ballet Folklorico of Mexico has been offering a movable feast to New Yorkers since its dazzling debut here in 1962. This weekend will mark the troupe's first appearance at the Felt Forum, with performances tonight at 8 P.M. and tomorrow at 2:30 and 8 P.M.

Long before psychedelic fashions became popular, Ballet Folklorico filled the stage with a riot of color—the pinks, reds, yellows and orange of the folk art that found itself woven into the spectacular costumung that is the company's trademark.

As the troupe came here almost every year, there were critics who began to say that Folklorico relied more upon the glamour of a revue format than an ethnic inspiration theatricalized into art.

But then, Amalia Hernandez, the troupe's founder and choreographer, would surprise the carpers and bounce back like a jumping bean with a new production that was top-notch.

The company's masterpiece, however, will always be an old favorite—the Deer Dance of the Yaqui Indians. No one should miss this remarkable solo on the current program.

As anthropologists will tell you, the practice of having a ritual dancer imitate the animal that his people hunt is a common feature of tribal societies. Vestiges of this custom can be seen even today in English villages where the country dancers wear an animal head as a partial disguise.

In the real sense of the word, the Deer Dance is a 'magic' dance if magic is understood as religion. The achievement of Ballet Folklorico has been to transfer the Deer Dance to the stage with a new brand of theatrical magic.

There is, of course, another side to Ballet Folklorico. The company actually does perform the Mexican Hat Dance, seen in the program's closing number.

Ella Macias and Jose Luis Gasca in the Ballet Folklorico's 'Zacatecas,' Mexican history in dance: the stage is filled with a riot of color.

There is, of course, another side to Ballet Folklorico. The company actually does perform the Mexican Hat Dance, seen in the program's closing number. Mexican culture is a blend of Spanish and Indian cultures, and the Folklorico's repertory has always reflected that special heritage.

Because there is so much heel stamping in these adaptations of Spanish dancing, there is a temptation to compare them to flamenco. Yet the mood is totally different. The Spaniard will keep his body more rigid and his feet closer to the floor.

Along the way, Miss Hernandez also likes to create ballets in the more conventional sense. In some, she reconstructs the pre-Hispanic ceremonies of the Aztecs and Mayans as deduced from their archeological ruins and sculptures.

Miss Hernandez founded Ballet Folklorico in 1952 and enlarged its government support in 1963. The troupe performing in New York is one of the five companies that make up the globe-trotting Folklorico organization.

Screen: Minnellis, Pere et File

By VINCENT CANBY

If you can imagine a feature-film equivalent to Radio City Music Hall stage show, it might look very much like Vincente Minnellis' "A Matter of Time," which opened yesterday—appropriately—at Radio City Music Hall.

Its principal star is none other than Liza Minnelli, Mr. Minnellis' daughter by Judy Garland and a screen personality whose appearance recalls her father and whose voice and mannerisms recall her mother.

'Serail' Fails To Be Haunting

By RICHARD EDER

There are a number of good names involved in "Serail" but the movie doesn't so much use them as drop them.

Hazardo de Gregorio, who has done a number of screenplays for Jacques Rivette and who wrote Bernardo Bertolucci's "The Spider's Stratagem," makes his debut as a director with "Serail," and was one of the screenwriters. He uses two of Europe's best young actresses, Bulle Ogier and Marie-France Pisier.

Stage: 'Martial Arts of Kabuki'

KABUKI drama from Japan is not new to this country. But it is doubtful that any presentation of Kabuki here has zoomed in on one specific convention of this highly stylized theater as did "Martial Arts of Kabuki," the fascinating program, given at Carnegie Hall on Wednesday night.

Liza Minnelli and Ingrid Bergman in Vincente Minnellis' "A Matter of Time." An operetta from which the music has been removed.

little Liza, whose eyes seem to have been widened surgically to play this part, relives the memories on screen, providing Mr. Minnellis with an opportunity for some fancy, romantic fooling of the sort that distinguished the regression sequences in "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever."

Screen: A 'Shadow of the Hawk'

A threshold of fright so minimal that it is bestirred by a jack-in-the-box or a Halloween mask seems to be the prerequisite for enjoyment of "Shadow of the Hawk," now playing at an assortment of local theaters.

The Composer Turns SoHo Cabaret Performer In 'Broadway at the Ballroom' Series

By JOHN S. WILSON

In the 12 years since "Fiddler on the Roof" opened in 1964, tens of thousands of people have seen the musical unaware that they were missing a song to Tevye's horse that was cut out before the show even went into rehearsal.

Sheldon Harnick who opens a series of performances by Broadway composers at the Ballroom this weekend.

lyricists have been the subject of a very successful series at the 92d Street Y.M.Y.W.H.A., but that was done as lectures with educational overtones, not as cabaret entertainment.

In "The Days of Wine and Roses," he played a man caught by fate in a desperate and hilarious class.

He brilliantly displayed his genius for comedy in such hits as "Some Like It Hot" and "The Odd Couple."

His versatile career culminated in his outstanding performance in "Save the Tiger," which earned him a long-deserved Academy Award.

Now Jack Lemmon teams with one of today's most arrestingly beautiful stars, Genevieve Bujo, in a story as warm and touching as it is unique.

The main dining section of Tavern on the Green "On one level, absurd; on another level, quite wonderful"

Less has never been more to Warner LeRoy, whose creation of Maxwell's Plum a decade ago gave New York its first respectably silly dining room... The Tavern is pure LeRoy excess: a series of rooms of wood, glass, and wood and glass, with crystal chandeliers, Tiffany-style lamps, candle sconces, brass balls, copper balls, carved plaster ceilings, carved wood statuary, cut glass and murals.

tures from the conventional roof of good taste. Yet the last of the Tavern suggests it had taste... The pleasure in the experience of sitting within the Tavern on the Green is not, happily, at the expense of Central Park.

Don't let a little thing like cash stand in the way of Pan Am's fall bargains.

Save up to 50% to:

Amsterdam	Hamburg
Belgrade	Istanbul
Bergen	London
Berlin	Moscow
Brussels	Munich
Bucharest	Oslo
Budapest	Prague
Copenhagen	Rome
Frankfurt	Warsaw

To take the vacation of a lifetime, you don't have to save for a lifetime. Or to take a business trip, you don't have to have a lavish expense account. Because now Pan Am is offering low fall air fares to 18 cities all over Europe.

Bargains on fares.

Starting with our regular economy fares, which are especially good for people on business trips since they have no restrictions, you can save from 13% to 21% over regular summer economy fares. And we have more low fares that can save you even more than the low fall economy fares.

For example, our 14/21-day fares. If you can stay at least 14 days and not more than 21, you can save up to 22% more. Then there're our 22/45-day fares. If you're lucky enough to have that much time for Europe, you can save 30% to 40% more.

And last, our Budget Fares. Which were very low to begin with and are even lower now. Because you can save about 50% over fall economy fares. All you have to do is buy your ticket 2 months in advance and spend 22 to 45 days vacationing in Europe. (Which should be easy enough.) Naturally, a fare that can save you so much is subject to other conditions and restrictions regarding travel dates and itinerary changes. Your travel agent can give you all the details.

The flights are regularly scheduled ones. On our comfortable 747s, you'll get a choice from 3 entrees in economy. And every flight has 2 movies to choose from ($2.50 per headset in economy).

Bargains on tours.

Of course our fall bargains apply to our tour prices also. One-Weekers. Two-Weekers. Three-Weekers. London Show Tours. Fly/Drives. Pan Am has tours to just about any place in Europe. For just about any budget. Just ask your travel agent about Pan Am's World tours to Europe.

Use the American Express Card.

Just tell your travel agent or our ticket agent that you want to pay for your Pan Am fall bargain vacation with the American Express Card.

You can even extend your payments with the American Express Card "Sign & Fly" or "Sign & Travel" plans. If you don't have a card, you can pick up an application wherever the American Express Card is welcomed. Or you can apply for one by calling toll-free (800) 528-8000.

But don't take advantage of our bargains just because they're bargains. Take advantage of our bargains because they're fall bargains. When the hysteria of summer subsides. The crowds of tourists have gone. But while the weather is still nice.

And with foreign exchange rates being better than they've been in a long time, your cash or the American Express Card can go a lot further.

Art: Beyond Good and Bad Taste

By JOHN RUSSELL

FRANK STELLA'S NEW WORK at Knoedler's, 19 East 70th Street, brings back to the uptown art scene a quality that to have left it forever: provo-had that quality when his mazes were first shown at Museum of Modern Art in 1960. Deviating regularly, the imperious, the refusal even to hint beyond what was actually on the canvas—all these were provocative. And one of the next 15 years was to wait for Stella to decide do next. (For a concise history of the very superior prospective of Stella's paintings Blum-Helman Gallery, 13 East 28th Street, through Oct. 16.)

very recently, Stella's work has the preordained look that in as so much the antithesis of Expressionist practice. Even the titled painting of 1975 that he Blum-Helman show to so wished a close has a thought-out, completely equilibrated look, with its or battens of honeycomb seem to rotate around a center. The even, unhurried, purely look is still intact, even if there here and there that an indignant hand has been at work. Stella's by comparison is bedlam: "a place of uproar or confusion." Honeycomb aluminum looks like steel girders and weighs nothing, so that Stella has been working with very large irregular shapes that dive in and out of the picture plane and in general the canons of formalist as they were set out in the 1950s if they were left uncolored just the look of buffed stainless steel that David Smith put to well, these would still be objects.

is the use, for instance, of a gigantic piece of costume brooches, buckles, clasps—as if they had been stuck on an overhasty dressmaker's table to pull a design together—are also strange curving variously likened to porpoises, able clefts in sheet music and Art Nouveau ornamental motifs in point of fact derive from the work of architect Antoni Gaudí. And there are the patterns that seem to have their own surroundings the way they come crashing through a hurricane.

They have been painted, dripped on and splattered on, exception, the colored marks are highly energized, and vitality they amount to a restlessness much that has held the abstract painting of the years. These works are not they violate all the rules of the art, and indeed they make us wish that now passes for it is both weak and senti-

"Good and Evil" was once ago) one of the most exciting anyone had ever thought up. If this show could be "Beyond Good and Bad"; if it were so,

Erica Meyers and Trio perform at Water St. Fountain

Meyers and her trio (the other two are Beth Davis and Deborah) stylized squiggles of and repose Wednesday at the fountain at 55 Water St. The two dances occupied the appointed plaza with a mix of staidness and concern.

It was the more appealing of dances, as it incorporated movements into its quietly structure. It opened with a ping sequence during which arms jutted out and were withdrawn as if in friendly conversation as the three dancers turned or extended their arms over then a rousing little burst of running carried them away from the performing area. The second piece, "Out to Lunch," was less tightly organized but performed with equal zest as runs and jumps alternated with sections of slow-motion walking and gesturing. It developed from complete stillness as the three women were lying on their backs and ended when they froze in place, one bending, another about to take a step and the third just staring.

The movement in both works was composed and confident, whether it consisted of feisty little hip thrusts and turns, or languorous arcs being traced with the arms. The musicians, David Javelosa, Axel Gros and Joseph Lyons, provided a suitable drone of sound. DON McDONAGH here and there amid the overall heaviness of the interior, but that is it. To their credit, Hardy Holzman Pfeiffer neither tried to preserve the building intact nor altered it so drastically...

The result is as pleasant and workable a set of spaces as can be expected, given the fact that the house, for financial and architectural reasons, could not undergo the extreme solution of having its interior gutted.

Indeed, the present building will probably work out splendidly for the small-scale objects of the museum's permanent collection...

INTRODUCING THE 1976 AUTO-TRAIN TO FLORIDA. NOW IT'S MORE THAN A WAY TO SAVE 900 MILES OF DRIVING. NOW IT'S THE MOST GRACIOUS TRAIN SERVICE AMERICA HAS SEEN SINCE THE GOLDEN AGE OF RAILROAD TRAVEL.

The idea of The Auto-Train™ is still good as the day we began serving you in 1971: to provide you the most convenient, sensible and relaxing way to take your car and family to Florida. A trip on The Auto-Train™ saves you almost 900 miles of driving, 35 gallons of gasoline, two or three nights on the road and immeasurable wear and tear on you and your car. It's still all of that.

And now it's the most luxurious as well. As luxurious as it was back in the great days of railroad travel.

Since you're probably too young to remember it, we'd like to tell you what it was like in those days. Then we'll tell you what it's going to be like these days on The Auto-Train™.

It was glorious. Everyone dressed for dinner on the Simplon-Orient Express.

The food on America's Twentieth Century Limited was so good people got in the habit of boarding the train at one station, eating lunch, and getting off at the next station, imagine getting on a train just to eat.

There were fresh flowers on every table. There were regional dishes on every menu: Lake Michigan Whitefish were a specialty the run west of Buffalo, Long Island scallops on the run east of Buffalo. The service was superb and best of all, courteous. The owners of the railroad advertised proudly that they started "A School for Courtesy" for their employees.

Dinner on The Twentieth Century Limited was priced in 1902, at $1.50—that's the equivalent of dinner at a very expensive restaurant today.

Lucius Beebe, America's foremost railroad historian, called The Twentieth Century Limited "The Greatest Train In The World."

And for more than half a century people made reservations months in advance and willingly paid the extra cost to ride "The Greatest Train In The World."

Simply, because a trip on it meant only the very best of everything.

And that's exactly what you can expect on The Auto-Train™ to Florida.

BEGINNING NOVEMBER 1, 1976. THE VERY BEST OF EVERYTHING.

As you read this advertisement, we're working. We're changing what you'll be eating, where you'll be eating, how you'll be eating—our menus, our dining rooms, our service. With just one goal: to make absolutely certain your trip to Florida on The Auto-Train™ is as luxurious as possible.

When you sit down to dinner you're going to think you're in a fine restaurant.

As you enter the dining room, you'll be greeted and seated by a host or hostess. There's new carpeting and new wall coverings, in rich tones of blue and tweed and deep brown and silver. There are touches of mirrored glass and subdued lighting. It's all very lush.

On your table you'll find linen table cloths and napkins, English glass for your water and wine and sculptured china. There'll be fresh flowers or a plant on every table. And candles.

Imagine candlelight dinner on a train in 1976.

You won't have to wait in long lines to serve yourself. You'll be served by Auto-Train™ staff dressed in sparkling new uniforms who have been trained in the art of courtesy and gracious service.

And unlike The Twentieth Century Limited, on the Auto-Train™ your dinner, as well as your snack later on and your breakfast the next morning, are included in your fare. And you don't have to dress for meals.

One evening you'll be able to choose from the menu pictured here. Another evening it might be a choice of Veal Cordon Bleu, Filet de Truite Amandine or Meuniere and Boeuf Bourguignonne. On yet another evening it might be Filet of Red Snapper with Shrimp Stuffing, Stuffed Boneless Breast of Chicken and Boneless Rib Eye Au Jus. There will be desserts of Key Lime Pie, Cherries Jubilee, Seasoned Fruits and a selection of cheeses one evening, Pears Helene, English Trifle or Peach Melba another and Cheesecake, Chocolate Layer Cake or Rhum Baba on another evening. Again, all complimentary.

You'll be able to choose delightful French red wines at surprisingly modest prices. And California white wines that are equally delightful and equally modestly priced. You may also select your favorite before and after dinner cocktails.

Our complimentary continental breakfast will be truly continental: Florida fruit juice, French brioche and croissants, cheese and fruit Danish pastries.

There will be a new selection of truly classic movies. And a new and better way to watch them. We've installed a new system that provides you both a better picture and better sound. And we've doubled the number of screens.

There will be live and lively entertainment in our Starlight Lounge Nightclub. Cocktails and late night snacks are available.

It's a superb new service. And we've even taken steps to make certain you have an incredibly smooth ride.

So from the moment you leave our Lorton, Virginia terminal to the moment you arrive at our Sanford, Florida terminal you can expect 17 of the most pleasant hours of travel you've ever experienced.

HOW MUCH DOES ALL THIS LUXURY COST?

Not very much. The fare is $175* for your car (which rides in a fully enclosed auto carrier on the same train) and $35 per person. Cars may not travel without at least one person.

If you reserve with us you may rest assured you will rest comfortably. Our reclining lounge chairs are the most comfortable on any form of transportation, bar none. They're thickly and softly padded. They have leg rests and there's so much room between chairs you can move yours back to a reclining position for a good night's sleep.

ABOUT RESERVATIONS.

Books of The Times

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT

TYRANTS. By Françoise du Plessix Gray. 316 pages. Simon & Schuster. $9.95.

It goes on in the eighth, and presumably climactic, volume of the series, "Lovers and Tyrants," a novel by the journalist and social du Plessix Gray ("Divine and Hawaii: The Sugar-ess"). There is abundant fame, the story's protagonist, a French aristocrat, has left a nuclear family and its awkward misow-misow-ness, gone to Tucson, on a weeklong meditation for The New York Times up with a homosexual Stewart some 20 years ago.

Françoise du Plessix Gray

Cycle of the Year," there is a moving account of how Stephanie is not told until long after her beloved father's death and how she is thus robbed of the right "to exorcise [herself] from the alluring spell of self-deceit." "First Wings" offers an ironic portrait of how Stephanie's devotion to a schoolgirl misfit ultimately works to save Stephanie herself from being a misfit. In "At Twenty-Three," she escapes the oppression of a French aristocrat who is himself determined not to be oppressed by Stephanie. And in "Tribe" she not only exorcises her father, but also comes to terms with a millennium or so of Gallic history.

What's more, Mrs. Gray almost always writes with fierce intelligence and perspicacity. She has a deadly ear for a certain kind of dialogue. ("I hear from Aunt Charlotte that you receive dissident priests for tea," says her ancient Aunt Collette when Stephanie pays a call during a visit to her father's family seat in the Vendée. "It has become much the fashion here too, deplorably. Have you read Saint-Beuve lately? Don't you agree with him that the progress of civilization is accompanied by a terrible degeneration of morals in mankind? Is your stepfather Catholic? Oh, he is Jewish. Ah, well, the Pope has forgiven them...")

But everything goes wrong with "Lovers and Tyrants" when Stephanie marries her puritanical New England husband ("Marriage and Madness") and then runs off in that final chapter ("Stephanie") to her rendezvous with androgyny. Perhaps it is that Stephanie is better at fondling the past than at scrapping with the present. Perhaps it is that Mrs. Gray began by writing a series of memoirs (some of which appeared in The New Yorker, by the way) and then failed in her attempt to project them into a novel about the untrammeling of women. In any case, when Stephanie in that final chapter writes in her journal, "I think I might have a novel right here in these very themes: One: woman's life as a series of exorcisms from the spells of different oppressors. Two: We must name the identities of each father before we can clear our way," toward the next stage of freedom... a reader is forced to reflect that while she may well have a novel "in these very themes," she has not yet succeeded in writing it.

A portrait of a woman submerged in a dull marriage—who suddenly confronts the devastating power of passionate, highly erotic love

"The most alluringly complex adulteress to come along in some time...An enigmatic moral thriller...Vintage Brian Moore."
—PAUL GRAY, Time

"In THE DOCTOR'S WIFE, Moore puts it all together—his feeling for the outsider stepping beyond the accepted norm of behavior, for the ordinary person placed in an extraordinary situation, for a woman suddenly precipitated into a passion she has never known before. His ability to look at life through female eyes is not shared by any other contemporary novelist I know of... Brian Moore has never written with more authority, greater conviction, or a truer grasp of woman's nature."
—John Barkham Reviews

"Skillfully paced and powerfully erotic, THE DOCTOR'S WIFE will certainly be Brian Moore's most widely read novel... He has created a woman whose fate keeps operating on our imagination when the book is finished. One of the pleasures of THE DOCTOR'S WIFE is that one wants to press it on a friend in order to be able to talk about it afterward."

International terrorism is about to claim its next victim... for "the glory of the cause."

THE Glory Boys
A novel by GERALD SEYMOUR

First the athletes at Munich... Then the hostages at Entebbe... And now a top Israeli atomic scientist is marked for assassination... stalked by two fanatical terrorists... a young Palestinian and a seasoned IRA gunman. Undercover security police — two British, two Israeli — struggle to stop them. Soon all will meet, and at least one will die, in an explosion of blood and fire.

THE GLORY BOYS is a harrowing, minute-by-minute account of modern terrorism. Gerald Seymour strips away the savagery and bravado, the audacity and ruthlessness of today's "killers-for-a-cause" to portray the complex web of human tensions — flaring resentments, sudden tears, seesawing battles for psychological advantage — that snare both killers and security forces.

Gerald Seymour's previous novel, Harry's Game, was hailed as "not only the year's best thriller, but one of the year's best novels." THE GLORY BOYS is even better — in every way more exciting, more complex, more richly textured. It's scary as hell. And only too possible.

Publishing: Joan Didion Doesn't Waste Words

By THOMAS LASK

THAT largish extract "from a new novel" in the current Harper's by Joan Didion ("Play It as It Lays," "Slouching Towards Bethlehem") is not from a work in progress. It is from the finished work and Sison & Schuster will be bringing the book out in March as "A Book of Common Prayer."

Miss Didion, who lives in Malibu, about 40 minutes from Los Angeles proper, was in New York last week with her husband, John Gregory Dunne, novelist and screenwriter, and spoke diffidently and with thoughtful qualifications about her new book. She is slight in appearance, unemphatic in manner and, like her prose, sparing of words. She leaves the impression that anything she has to say is really in her books.

"A Book of Common Prayer" had been in Miss Didion's mind since 1970, but she really did not get down to writing it until the last year and a half, putting in six- and seven-day weeks. It's about an American woman whose husband is a successful lawyer working for left-wing causes and whose daughter from a previous marriage is a Weather Underground type in the style of the 1960's. A good deal of the story takes place in a fictitious Central American country.

"Common Prayer" is likely to reinforce earlier judgments that Miss Didion is, as someone remarked, a good writer writing about bad times, always penning a suicide note to the world. However, she does not see her fiction in that way.

"I don't think of the books as despairing," she said. "Play It as It Lays" was affirmative in many ways. With a glint in her eye, she added, "Perhaps I'm so depressed at times that the book seem affirmative."

She conceded that, in dealing with decadent societies and corrupt regimes, her books took on political overtones. "I don't think politically on a day-by-day basis," she said, "but I was surprised at how political the new book seemed to be."

But she did not want her central character, Charlotte Douglas, to stand as a political symbol. "She's someone I don't understand any more than Grace [the narrator in the novel] understood Charlotte started as a deluded romantic with a strong sense of self. She refuses to deal with reality. She deals with ideas. I sort of discovered her as I went along. She was not modeled on anyone."

Perhaps even more surprising is that the Central American country that figures in the book is also not modeled on any specific land. She said that she had had no experience with Central American countries except in having touched down for about an hour in one of them. Yet the land of her imagination ("The first time I had a whole country in my mind") was so vivid to her that she was reluctant to turn back to the streets, houses and avenues of California she knew.

For this book, Miss Didion tried to avoid the ellipses that characterized "Play It." She says she has the sense of the book's not being so spare, though no one will ever confuse her style with that of Thomas Wolfe.

She has done no screenwriting since she worked on "Play It" and the forthcoming Barbara Streisand version of "A Star Is Born." But she does not scorn the work. For a novelist, it offers definite benefits. "It's so different; there is no crossover to fiction writing. Doing a screenplay is like doing a big puzzle. It's a wonderful thing to do when you're not doing a book. It's a change that lets the well fill up. Some people teach; I don't have the gift. It's fun, but it's not so gratifying as doing a book. At the end, the words are not there on the page."

Oct. 24 and 25 will be a couple of days for Leonard Harris, the television journalist and drama critic, to remember. On the 25th, Crown Publishers will be issuing his first novel, "The Masada Plan," a derring-do fiction set in the year 1979, when Israel faces an overwhelming attack by the Arabs. On that day, too, Crown will be auctioning off the subsidiary rights to the book at a figure that goes up and down in the author's imagination, depending on how sanguine he feels at the moment. How sanguine he will feel that Monday may very well depend on how well he does on the previous day in the New York City marathon, which he is entering, determined to run the entire 26 miles and 385 yards through the five-borough course that has been laid out for the race.

Though there is no organic connection between the fiction and the footrace, Mr. Harris is in earnest about both. The long-distance running started as jogging exercises in 1966, but only in the last year or so has he seriously been extending himself and his distances. He runs six days a week every morning, wherever he is, usually through Central Park, last summer at Amagansett, L.I.

"The Masada Plan" is an undiluted adventure story, not especially an Israeli tale, in spite of its name. It is set in New York, a city Mr. Harris knows well, and the major characters are American types, whom Mr. Harris knows well also. Even the novel's Israeli representative to the United Nations is American-born. The nearest anyone in the novel comes to serious running is when the hero is chased and escapes his pursuer.

The book has been, Mr. Harris said, "the most remarkable experience in my life. He added: "It's done a lot for me. I set out to write a commercial book, but I found more in it and in me."

TV WEEKEND

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

With baseball's Series looming on the NBC-TV schedule, this weekend's sports focus is on the playoff games. In the American League, the New York Yankees will play the Royals in Kansas City Saturday at 12:30 P.M. and Sunday at 9 P.M. Both games will be carried on Channel 7 and 11. For the National League, the Cincinnati Reds will play the Phillies in Philadelphia Saturday night at 8 and Sunday at 3:30 P.M., only on Channel 7.

Friday

Elsewhere, "The Great Houdinis," an ABC Circle Film that can be seen tonight at 9, is another of those peculiar television concoctions that intentionally blur the line between reality and fantasy. Based on the life of Harry Houdini, the illusionist and escape artist, this one is preceded by the explanation that "the following is a biographical dramatization created from both fact and fiction." Ponder the contortions of that one.

The movie itself, written and directed by Melville Shavelson, is a shaky affair but it is crammed with delicious moments for collectors of the absurd. The narrator, who is also one of the more prominent characters in the drama, is played by Vivian Vance in the best wise-cracking manner of her "I Love Lucy" days. The problem is that the wisecracks don't quite jibe with the rest of the script, which focuses on Houdini's nearly total breakdown by way of his obsession with the occult.

In its incredible variety, the casting is splendid. Paul Michael Glaser, the Starsky of ABC's "Starsky and Hutch," plays Houdini, whose real name was Erich Weiss. His possessive Hungarian Jewish lover is Ruth Gordon in thick Yiddish cadences. His shiksa wife is Sally Struthers ("All in the Family") and his temporary mistress is Adrienne Barbeau ("Maude"). Add to these Bill Bixby as a spiritualist minister, Nina Foch as a spiritualist reverend, Peter Cushing as Arthur Conan Doyle, Wilfred Hyde-White as Superintendent Melville of Scotland Yard, and Maurine O'Sullivan as Lady Doyle—and the mixture becomes irresistible for any self-respecting buff of the "B" movie.

At 10 this evening, Channel 13 will carry a Senatorial debate between James L. Buckley, the incumbent, and Daniel P. Moynihan, the Democratic challenger. And "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," returning this week with new episodes, can be found at 11 on WNEW, Channel 5.

Saturday

For some curious reason, the local schedules are unusually heavy this weekend with assorted discussions and examinations of South Africa. Perhaps it's because network news generally has found the important story elusive in terms of obligatory film footage. In any case, WCBS' "Channel 2/The People," at 2:30 P.M., is concluding a two-part report on the subject; this one airing the pro-government views of Les de Villiers, South Africa's deputy secretary of public information, as well as the stands of two American blacks, Andrew Hatcher and Jay Parker. Chris Borgen, the moderator, does a good job of controlling his skepticism and occasional astonishment. On WABC, tonight at 7, Roger Grimsby, returning from a South African visit, is given an hour for a collection of interviews representing a broad range of opinion among whites and blacks.

Sunday

The long-lived "Young People's Concert" series with the New York Philharmonic returns to CBS at 5 P.M. with a lively essay on "Fanfares and Fugues." The writer, narrator and conductor is Michael Tilson Thomas, whose youth is somewhat disguised by a beard (which is not new because the program was regular months ago at Lincoln Avery Fisher Hall).

Mr. Thomas, perhaps in his young audience, is ebullient in approach. Illustrating the attention-grabbing poses of fanfares, he has the orchestra conclude in a position with a shout of "Debut!" Debussy's "Martyrdom of St. Sebastian" to Bach's Suite No. 3 are impeccably dignified.

This evening marks the ending of the new public television and British imports for the Theater series. Beginning tomorrow and continuing for the next few days, the fare will be "Martyr," a dramatization of the novel.

This British Broadcasting Corporation production does not do original impact of the novel; it has been lost forever in history. It has too successfully, in my opinion, and petty atmosphere which Emma Bovary rebels provides an exceptionally fine chance in the person of France as Madame Bovary.

Pavarotti Has Change Of Voice

Calaf and Radames, lyrics parts called "spinto" by Italians that implies a pushing up of the into the next weight class.

"I will still do Memorino in Pasquale," because Memorino is the ideal lyric-tenor. Pure but the tenor who can sing but Memorino is not a very tenor." What about the heavy parts, such as Otello, which require a type of voice known as "forza"? Mr. Pavarotti stiffened; use those words with me. Neu restore di forza is not in my mind. "Would he ever consider it?" "I will do Lohegrin before I am because he is the most Italian of tenors. But not more. I don't want to sing bel canto, because the strict voice a little. But I force, ever, I must even be careful Puccini. Because Puccini take care of the voice like Bel Mr. Pavarotti's ideals among of the past reflect this mix. On one hand he loves the lightness of the unforced lyric, "tenore di grazia," typified by Schia and the pure lyric rep by Jussi Bjorling. But he course, idolizes Caruso and Arturo, who successfully made a generous passage to heavy roles.

Caruso's career, in fact, set a model for singers ambitious in vocal weight. When he audited his first teacher, Guglielmo Vo Naples in 1891, that maestro's was that the voice was so soft it sounded "like a wind through a window." Over the Caruso's voice gained in thrust, but some admirers of the "tenore di grazia" quality of that American singers never the voice at its finest, that sweetest and most flexible. T soon developed a baritone on a trumpetlike ring that served such roles as Radames and The change seemed to have celebrated after the 1908-9 season Caruso developed vocal trouble left his tenor darker and, it said, somewhat coarser.

One of the Few Resisters
Bjorling is a paragon among comparatively few important who resisted pressure from him and opera fans. He never even a moderately heavy part was past 50.

Tips on Tickets

The Monday evening performance of "Il Trovatore" is sold standing-room tickets at $2.50. Will be sold at the beginning at 10 A.M. on Monday. It's important to get there as possible. Diehards may call at the box office for last cancellations.

The difference in weight classes is not a matter of age, that enters into it, or of physical range. In fact, any three will give three varied explanations. Mr. Pavarotti, it is mostly a "accent, not loudness." That plain characters in opera, an upon to dig into the emotional dramatic content of the music more abandon and to sustain the strain and emotional tension periods. In the 19th and 20th century composers began creating characters, such as Otello and and to force them to compete increasingly heavy orchestrations even in his lighter moments times requires a kind of raw controlled attack on the note would have been thought unby older bel canto composers.

Where the Meaty Roles Are
Unfortunately for the mature tenor, such as Mr. Pavarotti, the meatiest roles in the standard story demand heavy, or more heavy voices. These roles figure in the popular "money" opera as "Aida" and "Carmen." They are forever on the lookout for potential Siegfried or Tristan, and young tenor has been ruined pushed in that direction. Metropolitan veterans will recall the case of Sullivan some years ago, and others less dramatically tragic.

Mr. Pavarotti's career is therefore evidence that there is something inside his head besides cavities. In his time he has Giuseppe di Stefano fading opera scene prematurely, probably because he began taking on roles in his early 20's. The circumstance of vocal imprudence. Melba, who possessed one of the lightest soprano voices of her time insisted on singing, on 1896 at the Metropolitan, the part of Brünnhilde in "Siegfried" suffered a total vocal collapse never took a step in that direction.

The legend, a lovely one. Melba had been invited to Forest Bird in Wagner's opera when she discovered that the Bird was an offstage part, mandated to have the only other tant soprano part, Brünnhilde. Process Is Sometimes Reversed.

Sometimes singers start out roles and go the other way. In American years, Maria Callas Isolde and Brünnhilde before on a lyric-dramatic and colorful rec, and there are those who her notorious technical impetuosity to this Wagnerian past. There support for the belief that true dramatic tenors and true Wagnerian tenors are natural baritone have learned to sing high notes. Melchior, Jean De Reszke, Svanholm, all renowned tenors, began as baritone.

Mr. Pavarotti, though a tenor in transit at the moment, suffered from no such impetuosity. And his goals are clear. He is able to summon up the vocal volume to sing a Memorino day night, and to sing into the volume to be sung into the cast of his 25 years. For a given and a poor dieter, the first be easier to reach than the set While proposals to consolidate all or part of the two exchanges have been explored a number of times in the past, yesterday's announcements marked the first time that they have acted in concert to study the question.

SAUDIS' TAKEOVER DUE TO ENCOMPASS ALL ARAMCO WORK

More Than Producing Assets Likely to Be Affected—U.S. Partners to Form a New Company

By WILLIAM SMITH. The Saudi Arabian nationalization of the Arabian American Oil Company, the most important single petroleum operation in the world, has taken on a new dimension, with the agreement expected to call for the Arab Government to take over control of the entire Aramco operation rather than just the oil producing assets.

Completion of the agreement is expected next week at a meeting that has been moved from Geneva to another site in Europe for security reasons.

It now appears that the Saudis will take over all of the Aramco operations, including the Aramco Overseas Company in the Hague which supplies logistic and technical assistance, and the Aramco Services Company in Houston, which provides service and engineering support to the Arabian operation.

It was learned yesterday that the four American partners would form a new company, to be known as Stemo, although that may not be its final name.

The Saudi decision to acquire the Aramco name and support operations was based on both sentiment and logic. The Saudis, under the terms of the forthcoming agreement will allow the American companies through Stemo to continue to market the bulk of Saudi oil at least until 1980 and probably beyond.

The new company basically will do what the present Aramco company does in terms of dividing Saudi production between the four parent companies and providing worldwide logistic support.

Britain Takes Harsh Steps to Aid Pound

Sets Lending Rate at 15% and Cuts Funds for Loans

By PETER T. KILBORN. LONDON, Oct. 7.—The British Government imposed harsh and unprecedented restraints on its ailing economy today.

The New York Times/Robin Lawrence. A 15-year pound note hanging in one of London's West End bars encourages spending. Yesterday, the British Government raised its minimum lending rate to 15 percent to make pound more attractive to foreign sterling holders.

U.S. Study Projects a Worsening Of Deficit in Industrialized Lands

By EDWIN L. DALE Jr. MANILA, Oct. 7.—A new United States analysis, not yet fully supported by the International Monetary Fund, projects a significant improvement next year in the balance-of-payments situation of the less developed countries that do not produce oil and an equally important worsening of the collective payments deficit of the industrialized countries.

The consequence, in the view of the United States Treasury, is that a number of industrialized countries will probably have to borrow large amounts from the L.M.F. These drawings will be under fairly strict conditions requiring them to take tough internal measures aimed at adjusting their payments deficit.

Britain, as already announced, will be the first to undergo this process. Italy will almost certainly be next. The United States does not expect to have to borrow. The collective deficit of the rich and poor oil-importing countries was estimated at $50 billion in a speech earlier this week at the L.M.F.'s annual meeting here by Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon.

But the surplus will still be huge. And, according to the Treasury analysis, it will be concentrated in only three countries that are unable to spend all their oil earnings—Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates.

Chains Report Gain In September Sales; Clothing Still Lags

By ISADORE BARMASH. The nation's largest general merchandise retailers yesterday reported moderate to sizable sales gains in September over a year ago, but there was continuing evidence of reluctance by American consumers to buy apparel and other soft lines.

Retail sales of autos and general merchandise, apparel and household durables are being watched closely for trends in the economy. Concern was raised when consumer buying of general merchandise faltered in July, but it rose in August.

World Energy Agency Says It, Companies, Will Allocate Oil is another oil embargo, the Energy Agency "will determine how much and the companies will allocate it," said agency's deputy executive director Wallace Hopkins, asserted in Washington.

David Rockefeller Predicts rise in oil prices

Meanwhile, the unemployment figures for September will be published tomorrow, and may or may not show a decline from the 7.9 percent unemployment rate that was recorded for August.

Mr. Carter's statement on the wholesale price index expressed his concern about the "consistent acceleration of industrial commodity prices."

refined petroleum products, machinery and nonferrous metals. The White House statement suggested, without naming them, that some of these prices might be coming down again.

That will not happen until after the election, however.

Unemployment Figures Due Today

Meanwhile, the unemployment figures for September will be published tomorrow, and may or may not show a decline from the 7.9 percent unemployment rate that was recorded for August.

One more consumer price index will also be published, about two weeks from now, before the election.

Other recent economic statistics have been somewhat discouraging. For example, the special index of "leading indicators"—economic statistics that have a tendency to turn up or down before the economy as a whole does so—recorded a sharp drop in August after rising steadily for 17 months.

Wholesale prices rose 9 percent last year and had been rising by considerably less than that amount in most of the earlier months of this year, leading to optimism that the rate would be considerably reduced for the year as a whole.

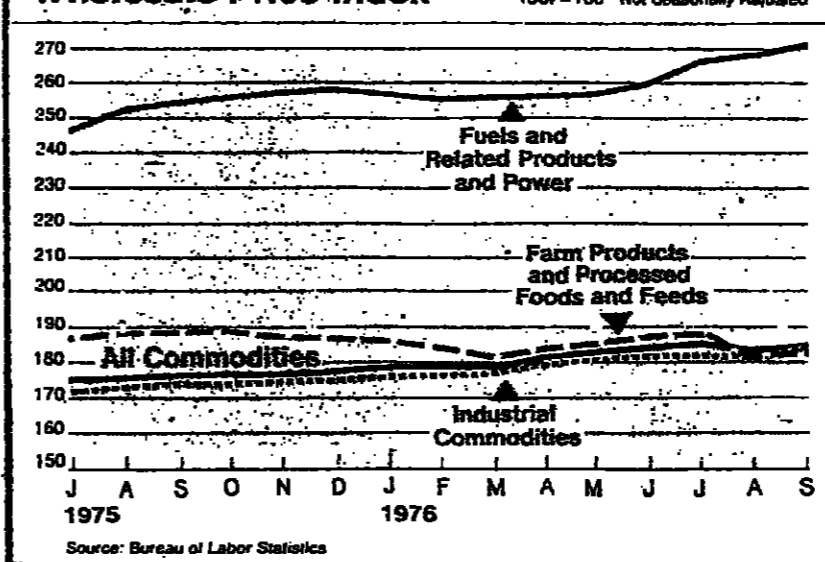

This is still possible and even probable despite the rise of nine-tenths of 1 percent in September that would, if continued for a full 12 months, mean an annual increase of 10.8 percent.

However, economists generally think that projections covering a whole year that are based on the record of a single month are unwise.

Mr. Carter's statement on the wholesale price index expressed his concern about the "consistent acceleration of industrial commodity prices."

"Mr. Ford has done nothing—absolutely nothing—to deal with the acceleration of inflation in this country," Mr. Carter continued. "He accepts high inflation and asks the American people to do the same. His lack of leadership and misguided policies are to blame for the worst inflation this country has experienced in 25 years."

The White House statement conceded that the increase of nine-tenths of 1 percent in the overall wholesale price index "was somewhat higher than expected" and said that the rise was "largely due to a greater than expected increase in industrial prices."

It added that Mr. Ford "continues to believe that the United States must be vigilant against a resurgence of inflation and his economic policies are designed to achieve this goal."

The Administration has consistently warned that policies that attempt to stimulate the economy and bring unemployment down more rapidly threaten to touch off a new round of inflation.

Administration analysts also observed that there was a big bulge in the wholesale price index at this time last year and that this bulge did not turn out to be permanent.

The increase in the prices of farm products during September amounted to 1.9 percent and of processed foods and feeds to five-tenths of 1 percent.

Compared with September a year ago, the overall wholesale price index was up 3.9 percent. The prices of industrial commodities were up 6.7 percent, the prices of farm products were down 2.7 percent and the prices of processed foods and feeds were down 4.8 percent.

The wholesale prices of finished consumer goods—those that need no further processing—rose 1 percent in September and those of finished consumer foods rose seven-tenths of 1 percent. Both of these increases represented dramatic turnarounds.

The wholesale prices of finished food products had dropped for three consecutive months and those of all consumer finished goods dropped in each of the last two months.

This turnaround can be expected to be reflected in retail prices within a month, or even less.

Commodity Price Index Declines 1.7 From Week-Earlier Level

The commodity spot market price index of food-stuffs and industrial materials fell to 198.1 from 199.8 last week.

The index compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics stood at 205.3 on Oct. 7, 1976.

Investors Insurance Files A Suit to Block an Offer By Superior for Williams

By HERBERT KOSHETZ

The Investors Insurance Company of America of Teaneck, N.J., said yesterday that it had filed suit in United States District Court in Pittsburgh to halt the tender offer of the Superior Tube Company to purchase all the common shares of Williams & Company at $22 a share.

Williams & Company in Wynnwood, Pa., said yesterday that it had been served with a complaint making it a defendant in another suit to halt the Superior Tube acquisition. The suit was described as a class action by an unidentified stockholder and asks among other things return of all shares tendered to Superior Tube, certain injunctive relief regarding the tender offer and an unspecified amount of damages.

Earlier a group of eight or nine shareholders filed a class action suit to halt the acquisition. The Investors Insurance Company charged that the Superior Tube tender offer violated Federal securities laws, and that the offer was inadequate. Investors Insurance said the shares are worth more than $50 each.

Williams & Company sells alloy metals, foundry supplies, tubing, air-conditioning, heating and welding supplies. It reported 1975 sales of $131,362,000 and a net income of $4.13 million.

On Oct. 1, Williams received a competing offer from the Williams Companies, a diversified pipeline producer of Tulsa, Okla. for $24 a share which would amount to $27.2 million for the 1,137,757 shares outstanding. The two companies are not related.

W. R. Grace Seeking El Torito Restaurants W. R. Grace & Company announced yesterday that it had signed a letter of intent to acquire El Torito-La Fiesta Restaurants Inc. in Los Angeles for Grace common stock. The company declined, however, to disclose the number of shares expected to be paid.

El Torito-La Fiesta operates 21 dinner houses and two fast-food outlets, all serving Mexican-style food. All the restaurants are in California except for one in Seattle. The chain has annual sales of about $20 million.

The transaction is subject to a final agreement, expected within two months.

Advertising Pursuing Whisky Sales With Eagle

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

Bernard Goldberg believes in advertising but doesn't think it can insure a product's success. He commissions consumer research, but doesn't feel bound by the results...

Bernard Goldberg, chairman of the American Distilling Company, displaying the new advertisement.

Dear Diary Method

With all of the money they invest in television, no wonder the advertisers that use it are interested in finding a method of measuring the effectiveness of their advertising.

And when it comes to new products

he also believes that "rather than starting from scratch, capitalize on an existing brand and build from there."

And looking for an immediately apparent consumer difference he commissioned a design for a bottle that is supposed to be a stylized eagle (closer to a penguin) it has so many facets to it that the introductory ads—both trade and consumer—use eight pictures instead of one to capture its many sides.

How important was the survey?

"I fly not necessarily with the seat of my pants but with my instincts," said Mr. Goldberg, "if the survey backed me up, all well and good, but I still go ahead without it."

When he joined American Distilling and took over from a management that had been advertising aggressively and proved it by spending a paltry $200,000 a year—Mr. Goldberg made quite a few changes. Not the least of them was discontinuing some 250 brands, cutting the corporate staff 15 percent, bringing in new sales personnel and hiring Hicks & Greist as a new agency.
